> (For the Bradford Reporter-) Management of Sheep.

Ma. Entroa :- Inasmuch as you not long since requested Farmers to write some of their experiments upon Agriculture, and send them to you for publication, even if the style was far distant from perfection, I have ventured to make an attempt in regard to the improvement of the noble and useful animal, Sheep, which you may give room for in G. SWAYNE'S CELEBRATED VERMIFUGE. voor columns, if you think it worthy. Now this I write, hoping that some among your numerous patrons, may possibly gain a little knowledge to im I rive their flock, if by chance they should happen to have an ordinary one. I do not mean chance, but mismanagement. I have gained so much valuable information from your Agricultural columns, that I now give you the following details:

Two years ago, last December, I drove home seventeen sheep. They were quite thin in flesh, and light, but young and healthy; eleven of them being lambs. I put them in a place by themselves as soon as I got them home. I had threshed my back wheat the preceding fall with a threshing-macline, which cut it considerably, and when I cleane l it through the fanning-mill it screened out about three bushels of the small bits of kernels and chaff. about half and half, which I was careful to save for my sheep. Then being resolved to try this simple experiment. I made a cheap trough by putting four short legs in the rounding side of a slab, and stood short legs in the rounding side of a slab, and stood able to dispose of a large quantity. Respectfully, it upright in their lot, and I nailed an edging on yours, &c. Townsend T. Sharp, P. M.

To Dr. Swayr, N. W. corner of Eighth and each edge of the slab. This experiment proved valuable to me.

I made a calculation how much I should feed them every morning to have my feed last until spring; and it would allow about three quarts per day, which would not be better than two quarts of clean backwheat, and perhaps not quite that. In the spring my sheep were in good flesh, their wool was smooth, long and tight, they were active and strong. They improved at such a rate that I would not have aken ten dollars and had them placed had interested as the strong of pure White Sugar, whereby everything disagreeable to the taste or smell is entirely removed, without in the was smooth, long and tight, they were active and back into the condition they were in when they were returned in December. The feed they had, could not be worth more than one dollar.

I would mention another point which I consider

Dr. SWAYNE, N. W. corner of Eighth and Race Cattle, and it is this: that they should always be kept separate in toddering time, for two reasons:

1. Because the sheep are continually receiving gorges by the cattle, which materially injures them. besides pulling out their wool, and making them look rough; and far worse, you frequently find a dead one where they are allowed to run with cattle. Well do Fremember a circumstance that occurred when I was a small boy. I went into the yard with my father, one cold morning, to fodder the berd and flock which ran together. Soon after we entered the yard, we found laying on the ground a very nice yearling ewe, with a part of herentrails hanging out of a hole no doubt made by a hom. and the ewe nearly dead. We put them back after a long trial, and she in time got well; but think of the distress this poor creature must have suffered. Nor indeed was this horrib'e eight all we saw, for we had not proceeded far before we discovered one lying dead that had been hooked to death: 2. Because what folder sheep run over is very much injured for cattle, and some is spoiled entire ly. The sheep will run over more where they are driven around by cattle, than they otherwise would. I am very much in favor of having racks for sheep to eat out of. Some farmers make them in manner, thus t-place a rail or pole on crutches perhaps two feet from the ground, and then stand rails or stakes obliquely across the pole, and in fact I-used to do so myself, but of late I have found what I think is a better plan, although the old plan saves hay to what it does to fodder on the ground. But sheep eating out of such racks will nearly spoil the wool on the top of their neeks by filling it with hay seed and chass. There is no loss of wool in this key by the other plan which Prefer to. It is made after the following plan: Take four posts, two feet and a half high, four pieces two inches thick; by three or four inches wide, according to the length, either hemlocks or hard wood, for they are better than pine to half a sail these arises are all proper length of time according to directions.
