pot of the demand of statety to evertee and essent of the demand of the demand of statety to evertee any proposition which shall give effectual guarantees against the extension of slavery rooms from what quatter it do not guarantees, with whatever plausibility it may be connected, or however imposing the cit. The unfavorable aircimagnates always attending a first commitment which may attend its introduction into these halfs. I have no such veneration for large committees, however distinguished the individuals of which they are composed, as to reconcile me to committees, however distinguished the individuals of which they are composed, as to reconcile me to the extension of clavery. The committee of thirteen, recently raised in the Senate, temposed as it is of cleven members, who are known to favor the policy of the South, will submit no plan of adjustment that is not wholly one-sided and sectional.—Nothing can be hoped for from that quarter in the cleant favorable to freedom. The committee was paised against the votes of those who represented in thirds of the trasmen of this countre-its members. wo-thirds of the freemen of this countryand elected themselves and each other, and I cannot view it in any other light than as a scheme to not view it in any outer right than as a scheme to force upon the country a measure of southern policy, under the name of "compromise." Yet it is hoped by some such process to quiet the North, bioped by some such process to quiet the North, and calm the agitation growing out of the dangerous and unwarrantable demands of slavery. Sir, no palitative which may be offered us by this company of the state will reach the discounter of the state of no palliative which may be offered us by this committee of thurseen, will reach the disease or give quiet to the country. This struggle will go on increasing in force and intensity until limits are fixed to the possessions of slavery—until the aristocracy of the South shall abandon its alarming pretensions, and rest content with that share of political influence to which it is justly entitled under the Constitution. Agitation will continue until there is foreder upon this floor, and the rights of a majoristitution. Agriculture was commune until there is freedom upon this floor, and the rights of a majority acknowledged and respected. Sir, these threats of disminon—his bold defiance of the rightful and constitutional authority of this Government, must cease, before peace and fraternal concord will be restored to the country. A stop must be put to this proscription of northern men, who do not acknowledge the divine character and inestimable blessir gs of slavery. In short, this struggle between the opposing principles of freedom and slavery, will go on, until that day shall arrive when the child that is nursed by a white mother, shall stand an equal chance in this Government, with one nursed in the lap of a slave. We claim for the men of the North an equality in this Government. It is ours by right of inheritance, and with the blessing of God we mean to have it. We wage no warfare upon the South. Their system of slavery is their own, as is the aristocracy it sustains. Their rights, under the Constitution, we pledge ourselves to respect as secred and inviolate; but it is the Constitution, as it shall be interpreted by the high powers of this Government, and not as it shall be construed by their imperial fial, by which we agree to abide.

The true ground of the present controversy, is not that slavery is assailed, or even threatened, within its lawful limits, the States where it exists, but that resistance is offered to its extension into the free territories of the nation. This is true and real ground of the present con reversy The slaveholde ground of the present conferency is no stavenousers are alarmed less the sceptre of political power shall be taken from their hands, and they demand an entreating the value of slave property, and of assuring to them the permanent control over the Government of the Union. True to the instincts and passions of an aristocracy, they threaten to rain when they can no longer rule. If the sixveholders of the South would rest satisfied with their aristocratic sociation and dominion in the slave States, and be content to share with the freeziten of the North the political power of this Government upon the terms and conditions prescribed in the Constitution, we largement of the area of slevery, as a means of inand conditions prescribed in the Constitution, we Gaiters, Slippers, Shoes, &c. should have no agitation, no strife, connected with the subject of slavery. We claim no right to interhere with slavery or any of the prefogatives it confers, in the southern States of this Urrion. It may stand there for centuries to come if it can so stand. m it has stood for centuries that have passed, with this Government. But when it attempts to pass be yound States limits and plant itself spon our national territories, and puts forth demands subversive of our institutions of Government, then slavery loses its local and domestic character, and becomes a subject of vial concern to the records of time whole it.

May 1, 1850:

WM. A CHAMBERLIN. of vital concern to the people of the whole Unron. Mr Chairman, some gentlemen, apparently with States into a fatal sense of security confidently asit is worthy of note, comes exclusively from north-em men, and from that class of northern men who em men, and from that class of morthern men who reconcile it with their duty to act upon all occasions in harmony with the interest and policy of slavery. It is directly and flatly contradicted, by almost eveand is in the face of every fact connected with the history and progress of slavery upon this continent of all our vast possessions, owned at the time of the continent of the Government together with those acquired from France and Spain, and by the annexsion of Texas, not one foot can be found to daw fee from the state of the stand, one door below the Brick Row, in the room former to of Texas, not one foot can be found to daw fee from the stand. arquired from France and Spain, and by the annex-sion of Texas, not one foot can be found to day, free from the institution of slavery, that was not se. fee from the institution of slavery, that was not seewed to freedom by the positive law of that Governthent. This existence or non existence of slavery in Gold L'Epinea, 4 jewels, a country, does not depend upon soil or climate, or Silver Levers, 13 jewels. reductins. It is regulated by pecuniary considerations, and the demand for labor. The number of Quarters, slaves, that can be profitably employed upon a given extent of territory, will depend much upon the character of its productions, but wherever labor is in demand-whereever there is work to do, there the stare is valuable, and there he will be taken, unless legal barriers are interposed to prevent it.—

This is proved by the whole history of the settlement of this confinent. There it no branch of labor in which slaves can be more profitably employed than in mining the precious metals. It was for this pur-pose that slaves were first employed in America. If is a mockery, Mr. Chairman, to pretend that

Il is a mockery, Mr. Chairman, to pretend that slavery cannot exist in the territories acquired from Mexico. It can, and it surely will go there unless prevented by the action of the Government, or the early organization of those territories as States, before slavery has time to diffuse itself over them. Let our action in these halls be controlled by the threats and policy of a slavebroiding aristocracy—organize territorial governments without any prohibition of slavery—break down all barriers against in introduction, by a submission on our part to the constitutional dogmas of the South, and slavery will as certainly overrun those territories, as that it has spread from the Potomac, south and west, to the gulf of Mexico and the banks of the Rio Grande. This result is not only admitted by the South, but the gulf of Mexico and the banks of the Rio Grande. This result is not only admitted by the South, but it is openly and boldly proclaimed as her scaled and fixed policy—a policy necessary, as she average to be safety, and from which, account than depart, she is willing to dissolve the Union. Yet, in the face of all this, we are mucked with the idle assurances of northern men; that there is no danger that therey will be extended: Riv, what is this controvery about? For what is this protracted and exciting straggle? It has but one foundation. It grows out of the declared, undisgrated policy of the South out of the declared, undisguised policy of the South to extend and perpetuate the system of human alavery. The issue is upon us. It cannot be evaled in responsibilities are correlet us meet them like them. The judgment of posterity and the tribunat of that the like is a like the south and the tribunat of the like is a like the south and the tribunat of the like is a like the south and the tribunat of the like is the like the south of the like the li a just God, will hold us accoun able for the isedes of this great question of FAREDON or Stavent.
