June Work to be doue.

THE FARM.—The most important business for this month is the accumulation and preparation of manures for automn use. A few minutes may be profitably spent every morning and evening, in throwing the results of the stables, yards, &c., under the manure sheds, and thus prevent the loss, in part, which would arise from evaporation when exposed to the sun. Use at least half a bushel of dirty or cheap salt for each cond of manure, to prevent fire-langing, and the production of grube, sings. Le ; an organional coating of charcoal dust to save the ammonia, will be advantageous; if this cannot be had, dust your manure heaps with plaster of paris, and keep your stable floors well dusted with the same material, to prevent bad odors. Cart muck, pond-mud, head lands, wood scraping, &c., &c., to your manure heaps; throw your weeds either in your hog-pen or on your manure heaps; if the latter, salt them, to prevent the seeds regenerating; throw the contents of your hog-pen each week up , on the manure heap, as the decomposition will be equally rapid there, and the loss by evaporation much less. When the hog-pen is empty, dust it with plaster or charcoal dust, and occasionally a little lime. Both the chargoal and lime are necessary to the health of the hogs, as they eat small quantities of each; and these materials, in addition to his immediate use, will be a saving, be retaining those gases which would otherwise escape, the quantities liberated by the lime will be saved by the plaster and chargos!. Should your manure heaps, prove dry, wet them with the spent ley of the soap boiler: if this cannot be had, use water. Should your manure heaps fire fang, it will prove that you have not used as much swamp-muck, head-lands, of the genuine is enveloped with a teastiful steel enor other apparently inert materials as might profitaor other apparently inert materials as might profits-also Dr. Swayne's signature and as a further security, bly have been added to the mass. Carry all your the portrait of Dr. Swayne will be added hereafter, so house washes to the manure sheds, and if you have as to distinguish his preparations from all o hers. time towards the latter end of the month, give them a careful turning over.

If you have planted notatoes or com in the early part of the month, you may sow on the surface of the ground between the rows and farthest from the plants, three bushels of fine salt to the acre. This will free them from the attack of grabe, or at least will assist in doing so. After it has lain a day or two, and been carried into the ground by the dews or rains, the cultivation of the crops with the plow, cultivator, or horse-hoe will then disseminate the salt in its diluted or more divided state, throughout the soil, thus enabling it the better to withstand every draught, as the soil will be rendered more retentive of moisture, and more capable of abstracting it from the atmosphere. These remarks are equally applicable to the best, carrot, and other root crops. It would be more advisable to have applied the salt to the land when fallow, at the rate of six bushels per acre, but where this has been neglected, it may be applied as above stated.

When hoed crops appear sluggish at this season they may be stimulated to increased action, thus:

Mix twenty parts charcoal dust with ten parts plaster of paris, and one part Peravian guano, each by measure, intimately together, and top-dress before hoeing-for a small handful to the hill and for other crops in proportion, will be found sufficient. Guano, when pure, is apt to prove to strong a stimulant, and thus kill the plant; but when so divided. it may be used without danger. When there materials cannot be had to divide it, dry road-dust, or indeed any soil may be used, but in that case it should lay in combination a few days before being

Potatoes may still be planted, but not with ood prospects of success so if at an earlier date, as: they will be more liable to disease, and the crop will not be so large.

Buckwheat may be sown safely until the 20th of

Ruta Baga turnips may be sown this month -Ground bones and salt are a good manure for this eroj: the proportion of salt as compared to the bones must be small, and should not be applied at the time of sowing the seed. The salt will be found equally vigorous in its destructive power upon inrects, and much more so as a manure, by being previously treated with lime, plaster may also be used judiciously with this crop.

We do not wish to be understood that these manures alone are the most judicious for raising Ruta Bagas on land not in fine heart, for they are rank feeders, and capable of appropriating large quantities of strong and termentable manures; but as such manures as ordinarily prepared give rise to many classes of insects destructive to the turnip those above recommended may be used with advantage. For modes of caltivation of this crop, see our article on carrots in former number.

This is also a proper season for planting the White Globe turnip, which will yield a larger crop than the Ruta Baga, and is therefore equally profitable for soiling, but does not sell so well for family use.

As to comparative value for fattening cattle, the earrot is to be preferred to all other roots, for, in addition to its high nutritive properties, it contains large portions of peetic acid, which has the power of gelatinizing the fluids on the stomach, thus rendering the contents more readily available and more easily digestible; this crop is easily kept during the winter, and is preferred by cattle to all other roots. Of the sort known as Belgian Carrots. nine hundred hushels may be readily raised per zere, and they will be found to take the place of eats for the use of the horse

Weeding and cultivating field crops should now be strictly athered to, for which purpose well conatracted cultivators may be used, with more economy than small plows; for if the rows be straightly planted, and equal distances apart, the improved cultivators may be run as closely to the plants as the hand-hoe could be used, and with onetwentieth of the expenditure of time. Those cultivators should be preferred, the teeth of which do not all point towards the clevis, as it is difficult to run those straight, while those with curved side. bars, with each tooth pointing straight towards its line of travel, are not inclined to oscillate, and therefore they neither cut off the plants, nor do they throw the earth towards them.

Destruction of insects should be carefully attend-
