ard tought the rule will a or court Moveable property, or capital, may precure man all the advantage of wealth; but property in land gives him much more than this. It gives him a place in the domain of the world; it unites his lite with the tife that arrinates all creation. Money is an instrument by which man can procure the satisfaction of his wants and desires. Landed proparty is theestablishment of man assovereign in the midst of nature. It satisfies not only his want sand his desires, but tastes deeply implanted in his na ture. For his family it creates that domestic country, called home, with all the living sympathies, and all the future hopes and projects, which people it. And whilst property in land is more con sonant than any other to the nature of man, it also affords a field of activity the most lavorable to his moral development—the most suited to inspire a past sentiment of his nature and his powers. In almost all the other trades or professions, whether commercial or scientific, success appears to depend solely upon himself-on his talents, address, prudence and vigilance. In agricultural life, man is constantly in the presence of God and of his power. Activity, talent, prodence, and vigitance, are as enecessary here as elseware, to the success of his labors; but they are no less insufficient than they are necessary. It is God who rules the season and the temperature, the sun and the rain, and all those phenomena of nature which determine the success or the failure of the labors of man on the soil which he cultivates. There is no pride which can resist this dependence, no address which can escape it. Nor is it only a sentiment of humility as to his power over his own destiny which is thus inculcated upon man; he learns also tranquility and patience. He cannot flatter himself that the most ingenious invention, or the most restless activity, will insure his success; when he has done all that depends Wintermite, Horscheads-E. S. Human, Havana I. upon him for the cultivation and the fertilization of the soil, he must wait with resignation. The more profoundly we examine the situation in which minn's tesum.—H. L. Pish, Rochester—Niles & Wheeler, placed by the possession and cultivation of the soil Bullulo. the more we discover how rich it is in salutary lessons to his reason, and benign influence on his character. This preponderance in a natural, legitimate, and salutary fact, which, especially in a great country, society at large has strong interest in recognizing and respecting.

BREEDING HORSES .- The report of the committee on horses, for the Chittenden Co. (Vermont) Agri- a la ge supply of cultural Society, contained some good remarks - Dry Goods, Groceries, Liquors, Ready made Clothing, In allusion to the hereditary transmission of qualities, it observed .

"The preogny will inherit the united qualities of their parents. The good as well as the bad quali- he flatters himself that he can and will make it the in ties will descend from generation to generation.-Hence you will see the importance of a knowledge of the parentage, not only as to the sire, but also to the dam. Peculiarity of structure and constitution will also be inheated. This is an important consideration, though too much neglected, for however perfect the sire may be, every good quality may be neutralized, if not overcome by the defective structure of the dam. THRIFTY FACIT TREES .- Having seen a statement, some time ago, in an agricultural paper, that to make fruit trees thrifty, in the month of March, wash them as high as a man can reach, with one quart of whale oil soap diluted in fifteen gallons of water, and it in April there are caterpillers, give them another dose; then round the roots of the apple and pear trees put two or three shovelsful of charcoal dust, or authracite ashes.
