Adjournment of the Legislature.

The Legislature of Pennsylvania adjourned on Tuesday last, after a session of ninety-eight days. Among the more important measures to the people of Bradford, passed by the Legislature, are the change in our manner of voting, and the appropriation to the North Branch.

By the proceedings which we publish in full, it will be seen that an appropriation of $175.000 has been made, with a provision that one-half the surplus shall be applicable to the work. This result was produced after a Committe of conferencee had failed to agree upon any bill, by the adoption of a new bill in the flouse and its immediate passage in the Senate.

The Free Banking Bill was killed in the House, by a refusal to consider it, by a vote of 45 yeas, to

-Our Representatives, Messrs. M'KEAN and Gines have returned to their homes, and we cannot allow this occasion to pass without bearing witness to the fidelity and ability with which they have discharged their duties. Brailford has never been better represented, nor her in erests been more carethe daily sessions of the body, their uniform and upright conduct gained them an enviable reputation and influence amongst their fellow members. They have been emphatically working-members, not tiring the House with long and windy speeches, which no one would listen to, impeding the transaction of business, but have confined themselves to their legitimate duties, that of forwarding the progress of matters of public utility. By their votes they have truly represented their sound and radical constitueney, and that constituency in return say to them. well done thou good and faithful servants."

End of the Fugitive Slave Case.

The Boston papers of Saturday contain the ful owing account of the termination of the Fugitive Slave Case: After the decision of Judge Woodbury last night that there was no ground to interfere with the cer ificate of Mr. Curtis, remanding Sims, preparations began to be made to convey him back. The brig Acorn had been hauled to the end of Long Wharf having been previously fitted up for an extra number of passengers. During the night the Court House square was filled with a crowd who were collected in knots, discussing the matter, and occasionally hooting at the officers. There were a number of females among them.

The proceedings in and about the Court House were closely watched by the Abolitionists. At about three o'clock, detachments of the city watch to the number of 150, armed with clubs and hooks, Square. The police force, under the command of Marshal Tukey, armed with short swords, assem-bled in the Square, went through some evolutions, and finally formed in a hollow square in front o the side entrance of the Court House. After all was ready, word was given to the U. S Marshal, and Sims was brought down and placed in the centre of the Square. He appeared to be in good spirits, his limbs being free from irons or handcuffs of any description. The procession was led by the U.S. Marshal and his deputies, followed by the armed police, they proceeded through Cour and State streets, and down Long Whart, followed fully guarded. Not the least attempt at violence was made. Mr. Colver and other persons in the crowd occasionally lenounced the proceedings, and called for the thun derbolis of Heaven to be poured down upon them. When the procession reached the wharf, the brig was found to be all ready, with the steamer Hornet alongside, with the steam up : Sims was taken immediately into the cabin. The Acom had two cannon on board to protect her from any assault on the passage. The word was given to let go the fastenings and she was soon under way.

About 30 police officers accompanied the vessel as far as the steamer went, as a protection; several officers of this city including U.S. Deputy Marshals Savin and Byrne, accompanied the fugitive in the vessel to Savannah. But as the vessel was about to leave the wharf, some of the crowd sang several hymis.

One man, just as Sims was going below, called out to him to preach liberty to the slave-and as
