to Orwell, Saturday June 2, 1851, FANNE CHAFFEE wife of Jayson Chaffee, aged 50 years. The people of Orwell knew her well, and will say of a trith, that she was the most comely personage of all their acquaintance. She was the very personification of goodness, gentleness, and compassion, mildness, generosits, benevolence, forgivness, and charity—for these shone conspicuously in all her actions. In her mouth was the law of kindness Kindness beamed from her eyes, and pity seemed to flow in copious effusions upon the sous of, grief, and unto the children of affliction. As a mother she was tender hearted-as a sister she was kind and obliging and as a wife, the heart of her husband did safely trust in her, and his confidence was never disappointed. Though dead, she yet lives, in the remembrance of those left behind, speaking to them in definite language, "to do good unto all-to bless and curse
