Agricultural.

Nutrition in Various Grains.

Wheat is one of the most important of our crops. The grain contains from fifty to seventy per cent of starch, from ten to twenty per cent. of gluten, and from three to five per cent of fatty matter. The proportion of gluten is said to be largest in the grain of quite warm countries.

It is a singular fact that, in all the seed of wheat and other grains, the principal part of the oil lies near or in the skin, as also does a large portion of the gluten. The bran owes to this much of its nutrive and fattening qualities. Thus in refining our flour to the utmost possible extent, we diminish somewhat its value for food. The phosphates of the ash also lies to a great degree in the skin. The best fine flour contains above seventy pounds of starch to each hundred. The residue of one hundred pounds consists of ten or twelve pounds of gluten, six or eight pounds of sugar and gum, and ten to fourteen pounds of water and a little oil.

Rye flour more nearly resembles wheaten flour in its composition than any other; it has, however, more of certain gummy and sugary substances, which make it tenacious, and also impart a sweetish taste. In baking all grains and roots which have much starch in them, a certain change takes place in their chemical composition. By baking, flour becomes more nutritious, and more easily digestible, because more soluble.

Barley containes rather less starch than wheat, also less sugar and gum. There is little gluten, but a substance somewhat like it, and containing about the same amount of nitrogen.

Oatmeal is little used as food in this country, but it is equal, if not superior, in its nutritious qualities, to flour from any of the other grains; superior, I have no doubt, to most of the fine wheaten flower of the northern latitudes. It contains from ten to eighteen per cent. of a body, having about the same amount of nitrogen or gluten. Besides this, there is considerable quantity of sugar and gum, and from five to six per cent. of oil or fatty matter, which may be obtained in the form of a clear, fragrant liquid. Oatmeal cakes owe their peculiar agreeable taste and smell to this oil. Oatmeal, then, has not only abundance of substance containing nitrogen, but is also quite fattening. It is, in short, an excellent food for working animals, and, as has been abundantly proved in Scotland, for working men also.

Buckwheat is less nutritious than the other grains which we have noticed. Its flour has from six to ten per cent. of nitrogenious compounds, about fifty per cent. of starch, and from five to eight of sugar and gum. In speaking of buckwheat or oats, we of course mean without husks.

Rice was formerly supposed to contain little nitrogen; but recent examination have shown that there is a considerable portion, some six or eight per cent. of a substance like gluten. The per cent age of fatty matter and of sugar is quite small, but that of starch much larger than any grain yet mentioned, being between eighty and ninety per cent; usually about eighty-two.

Indian corn is the last of grains that we shall notice. This contains about sixty per cent. of starch, nearly the same as oats. The proportion of oil, and gum is large, about ten per cent.; this explains the fattening properties of Indian meal, so well known to practical men. There is besides these, a good portion of sugar. The nitrogenious substances are also considerable in quantity, some twelve to sixteen per cent. All these statements are from the prize essay of Mr. J. H. Salsbury, published by the New York State Agricultural Society. They show that the results of European chemists have probably been obtained by the examination of varieties inferior to ours; they have not placed Indian corn much above the level of buckwheat or rice, whereas, from the above, it is seen to be "in most respects, superior to other grain."

Sweet corn differs from all other varieties, containing only about eighteen per cent. of starch. The amount of sugar is, of course, very large, and the nitrogenous substance amounts to the very large proportion of twenty per cent.; of gum, to thirteen or fourteen; and of oil, to about eleven. This, from the above results, is one of the most nourishing crops grown. If it can be made to yield as much per acre as the harder varieties, it is well worth trial on a large scale.—Professor Norton's Elements of Scientific Agriculture.

Disciplining Fowls.

The Chinese, living in canal boats, send their ducks ashore during the day time, to earn their living, and whistle them home at night. The last duck gets a switching, there is consequently a duck race—each one trying not to be last.

Some years back I kept a few fowls, and among them was a fine, large, Dominique cock that would get into my flower garden and then call his family about him. There was of course, great scratching among them until I interrupted the sport by driving them off. The hens would fly in great alarm; not so chanticleer; but perching himself on the fence, he would send me a crow of defiance, and soon as my back was turned clack a recall to the hens.

This scene was repeated so often that at last I got out of patience with his impudence, and ran him down. When caught, I thought the Chinese method of drilling birds of another feather might have some effect upon my prisoner; so, holding him by the legs, I laid him down at his favorite scratching ground, and, with a light switch, whipping him across the wings. After he had been well chastised, I let go of him and arose; but he lay still. I stepped back a foot or two when he raised his head.—At a threatened motion of my switch, however, he laid his head down again. I then retreated some twenty feet, keeping my eye upon him, and holding my switch "in terrorem." He lay almost perfectly quiet during the time. Occasionally he would raise his head, but the slightest motion of my arm, at this distance, was sufficient to make him resume his very unnatural position.

Being much amused at the success of my experiment, I held him in this position by the power of whip and eye, for some fifteen minutes, and, in the end, had a little difficulty in starting him off.

The consequence was, a complete reformation in his moral character, and, he never afterwards trespassed on grounds that was forbidden him.

Probably some of the farmer boys who read the Post, may like to repeat the experiment; if so, let me advise them not to act cruelly towards what ought to be the pet of farm-yard. The lightest possible switch should be used—a blade of grass will almost answer. It is not the pain he suffers, but the degradation that has effect.—Exc. Post.

ORGANIZED upon the "mixed principle," Stock and Mutual, which combined features offer to insured members double the usual security. The Cash system of payments has also been adopted, thus avoiding the heavy drawbacks created by unpaid premium notes. The table rates of premium, upon which its policies are being issued, is the only scale experience has proven should be adopted, as affording requisite security to be insured, and an undoubted guarantee for the perpetuity of such institutions. An experimental table may be found worthless, at the very instant a policy should possess its greatest value. Life Insurance, very properly, is arresting the attention of the world. The public however, in their commendable willingness to embrace and employ its wise and salutary provisions, should make ultimate security the primary and most important object, which can only be attained by so adjusting the premiums as to anticipate unexpected losses and fluctuations of every kind. Afflicted do not Despair

Another fellow being rescued from Death by Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup.

The following case is one of the greatest triumphs of medicine over disease ever published in medical history. Read it!

Prompted by no other than the feeling of benevolence, and for the benefit of my afflicted fellow beings, I desire to make known a short description of my disease, and the unexpected cure I obtained from SCHENCK'S PULMONIC SYRUP. About three years ago I was afflicted with a violent cold, which settled on my breast and side, and every few days would raise considerable blood; my cough was tight and distressing. Every day I had violent fever creeping chills, and profuse sweats at night, with great difficulty of breathing and great loss of appetite; my system was entirely prostrated, being confined to my bed most of the time. Two of the most eminent physicians of this city attended me, and after exhausting all their skill, pronounced my case incurable. Indeed, one said my lungs were almost gone, and I could not possibly recover. At this stage of my disease, I was prevailed upon to try Dr. Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup, and before I had taken half a dozen bottles, was so far recovered as to be to go about the house. It seemed to strengthen my whole system—it loosened the cough and stopped the bleeding—my bowels became regular, and every thing I ate, seemed to digest easily and nourish my whole system. Indeed, such was the rapid progress of my health and so sudden the change, that I became too sanguine of a speedy cure, and abandoned the use of the medicine before the disease was thoroughly eradicated, which resulted in another attack of bleeding at the lungs last fall, accompanied by a distressing cough. I again commenced taking the Pulmonic Syrup, and sent for Dr. Schenck who, upon careful examination, advised me to continue using it. Before I had taken four bottles, an abscess formed on my side, which gathered and broke, discharging, as near as I can judge, a pint of very disagreeable yellow matter. This seemed to cleanse and purify my whole system. From this time I began to get better, and am happy to say entirely recovered. I am sure at the time I enjoy better health than I have for the last two years. Since I commenced taking the Pulmonic Syrup, I have never failed to recommend it wherever I went, that others, as well as myself, might be saved from that awful disease; for I feel it a debt I owe to the afflicted to publish it to the world. Permit me to mention a few cases which have come under my immediate observation. Being on a visit to Camden, N. J., last summer, I saw a child, evidently in the last stage of bowel consumption. The mother informed me that the physicians had given the child up as incurable. I told her what benefit I had received from the use of Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup, and induced her to procure a bottle. I heard nothing more from the little sufferer until about three month after; being in the market, my attention was drawn to a lady who observed me very attentively. She finally approached me, and asked if I was not the lady who recommended Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup to her dying child last summer in Camden. I replied that I was. She told me that her child had entirely recovered, and was uncommonly healthy. Her name is Mrs. Wilson, and she resides in Bridesburg. Another lady I would mention in particular, who had a scrofulous affection. Her neck and neck presented one continued sore, and one of her eyes was seriously affected with it. She had become greatly emaciated, and to all appearances past recovery. I induced her to try Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup, which she did, and is now perfectly cured. Another case, Mrs. McMullen, whose residence I will give on application, was evidently in the last stage of Consumption. I prevailed upon her to try the Pulmonic Syrup. In a very short time she was entirely recovered, and now enjoys excellent health, having become exceedingly fleshy. These are three cases within my knowledge, which I know were cured by Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup. Any who doubt this statement, and will take the trouble to call on me at my residence Parrish street five doors above tenth north side, I think I will be able to satisfactorily convince them by own case, and others which I know have been cured by this Syrup. Since my cure, there have been so many to see me to know what I took, that I have had a very good opportunity of knowing a great many that have taken it, and have been greatly benefitted thereby, and I think if persons afflicted with Consumption or Liver Complaint, would send for Dr. Schenck, and let him carefully examine their lungs, and if he says he can cure them, follow directions, and prevent taking cold, they will rapidly recover.
