CT It is proper to state that H: L. DIEFFERBACE Esc. for a year past associated with us in the editor rial department of the Keystone, withdrew from his connection with it on the 6th inst.

The above cur: paragraph appears in the Keystone of the 26th ult. We had observed that the name of Mr. DIEFFENBACH was withdrawn from the head of the editorial columns, and more particularly remarked the change in the spirit and ability with which the Keystone was conducted. This paragraph of four lines, tardy in its appearance, is all the mention made of it, although it is customary, in taking leave of readers, to make some more forinal and extended announcement.

It would have been equally " proper" and quite to decent to have stared, (or at least have allowed M. D. to state) the reasons why the connexion was broken off in such a summary manner, instead of thus cavalierly disposing of the matter. We have heard several intimations regarding this change. which we are slow to credit, and the more unwilling to believe, because we had relied upon the Reystone as the exponent of radical Democratic doctrines, and the organ and mouth-piece of those of deters, and desire to keep the Democratic party, nure and undefiled. We have some curiosity to which the Keystone has fallen-and also if its putication had anything to do with the withdrawal of Mr. DIEFFENBACH 7

The Keystone, after the death of the lamented MILLER, went down into the lowest depths of inefficiency, of servility to slavery, and doughtacism. The late editors had raised it from the slough, and as a democrat, has given him a hold upon the afgained it a proud reputation as an able, indepenand which was a terror to the rascals and evil doers ter. congregating at Harrisburg.
