Functions of Leaver.

Peruvian (Jes'is ,i . The sense of the beautiful, in every beholder. receives an exquisite granfication in gazing upon foliage, the mantle of hving green, in which the vegetable would is arrayed during the season of growing and development. Few, however, are and roof the important functions which those countless leaves perform in the growth of plants. To the common eye, they but appear as the lavish orna-Horehound ment which bean ify the vernal landscape, and invest each tree and shout with a garment of loveliness. The secret but vital functions are dissolved only to the eye of science. They are to the plant, what the lungs, the stornach, and the skin, are to Carraway the animal. It is through them that the important Gamery fine ions of breathing, diseasion, and preparation Rape Girdin er : ccompolished: Plants, like animals, breathe, digest their food, and throw off their surplus moisture, and perhaps a portion of the substances cont ited in their fluids, by purspranon grand those vital operations are all performed by the leaves which adorn them.

The sap, which is absorbed by the roots, constandy ascends up the vessels of the plant, during its growth, to the leaves. Here it undergoes a change, analogous to that effected in the food of ansmals, in the process of digestion: The superfluous water is thrown off by the perspiration of the leaves while that which remains is converted in the juice. called the true sap, which, like the blood of animals in its after circulation, furnishes the various substances found in plants.

The leaves, as intimated, are the prespiratory organs of the plant. The office of persperation or and Champaign Wines-Cordials, Rose, Amour Motranspiretion is performed by the underside of the kee, Noyeau &c , cheaper than ever offered. leaf, and may be almost entirely stopped by spread ing varnish on the surface. The quantity of moisthan during the night. Dr Haie found that a cabbage transmitted daily a quantity of water nearly fleurs, verbena, beliotrope, sweet brier, geranium to half its weight.

The leaves of plants absorb from the atmosphere carbonic acid, in the form of gas. This acid is a combination of earbon or charcoal, with oxygen, one of the constituent gases of the atmosphere. The seid is decomposed, the carbon being retained by the plant and composing a large part of its substance, while the oxygen is emitted. The obsorption of carbonic acid takes place in the light, the influence of which is essential to the process. This sfact explains the phenomenon that plants cease to grow and that they languish and perish when deprived of light. It is ascertained that trees derive a large portion of their carbon or wood substance from the carbonic acid absorbed by their leaves from the air. Van Helmot planted a willow, which weighed five pounds, in a pot containing two hun dred nounds of earth. This he watered for five years, and, at the end of that time, the tree was found to weigh one hundred and sixty nine and a quarter pounds, while the earth in which-it stood was found to have lost only two ounces From whence did the tree derive that large mass of carbon which constituted the chief portion of its in cr-ased weight? Undoubtedly from the atmosphere -the carbonic acid absorbed by its leaves; the water, with which it was supplied, holding a portion of carbon in solution, may have furnished a part of it; but the carbonic acid of the air must have been the chief source of supply.

Plants during the day emit oxygen, the vitalizing elament of our common air, through their leaves .-This is derived from the carbonic acid as it is de composed, for vegetables are found not to omit exwgen unless carbonic acid be present.

During the night the leaves of the plants absorb oxygen, and form with it carbonic acid, a part of which they emit, and part is retained. By this process of absorption of carbonic acid by the leaves of Mants, the atmosphere is purified of that portion of it which, in the form of gas, is so noxious, and, when concentrated, so fatal to animal-life, it being the noxious air found in deep wells, and which rises in the furnes of burning char coal. Thus is this substance in nature-breathed into the atmosphere from the lungs of myriad animals, and diffused from the decomposition of animal and vege able substances, and which if not diminished, would render the air we breathe in fit to austain life-absorbed and converted into the firm aubstance of innumerable trees and shrubs, while its oxygen is returned to the atmosphere to revivi-

Jy it. Finally, the leaves of plants absorb water as well as carbonic acil and oxygen. It is found that a plant which dying for want of moisture at the root will revive and grow when a branch with leaves is placed in a vessel of water. A beautiful illustration of this fact is also behald in the renewed greensess of the leaves after summer shower—the parched landscape appears to smile with gladness, as if constons of the blessing than received .- Kentucky Cultivator.

urg, Philadelphia Co., June 25, 1451. The undersigned, residents of Tacony, eight miles hove Philadelphia, being well acquainted with John C. Green, and the circumstances attending his case, feel impelled by a deep sense of imperative duty, to make universally known to the public his entire recovery from the very last stages of Pulmonary Consumption. So entirely helpless was his condition, having been but a brief period since, in that rapidly sinking and emaciate state, as to ut erly preclude, in the opin ion of his physicians and friends, who watched by his bedside, all hopes of even a temporary recovery and restoration to his present robust health. Thus the careful use of your invaluable Specific, the Pulmonic Syrup, makes it our belief, under the circumstances of hi previous prostrate, not to say dying condition, one of the most startling results that the whole annals of medical skill ar science can produce. It deserves to be imperishably recorded to your credit, and secure to you the greatest discoverer of this hitherto remediless disease, a lasting monument and a world-wide reputation in the healing art, that no time may either diminish or destroy. Having witnessed Mr. Green's distressing struggles and sufferings from a continued cough, superadded to the other symptoms consequent upon, or attending to the last stages of a pulmonary disease and moreover, it being so generally believed by his nu-merous friends that no human power could relieve, or protract his life, much less restore him back again to his former health. we feel it thus our duty to give our unqualified testimony of Mr. Green's perfect recovery, by means of the exclusive use of your wonderful Syr up; and we should indeed rejoice if we could be maile the humble instruments of relief and cure to others who may be so unfortunate as to be similarly afficted.
