EXPLODING THE CHARGES -The remarks of Lord John Russel on the alleged unconstitutional inter ference of Prince Albert in political matters, with which he had no business, was considered as hav ing successfully refuted these accusations. He anaivzed the various charges of unconstitutional interference on the part of the Prince, either at the Horse Guards, or with Ministers themselves, by thwarting their advice : and listly give an emphatic denial to the assertion of his having kept up a correspondence with English Ambassadors abroad. He succeeded in eliciting the sympathies of his hearers for the Prince Consort as an extremely ill used person and was londly cheered by all parties at the con clusion of his speech: The London Advertiser, however, looks upon the refutation as affording indirect testimony of their truth.

How TO INCREASE TRADE -The Woonsocket Patriot, in a well written article under the above caption, has the following among other excelent remarke :

"Advertising, when followed systematically and liberally, has never failed to bring a rich reward. A sale secured by an advertisement, has often paid for a whole years advertising; and all who have advertised judicionsly, have realized profile many times beyond the outlay, and sales and se cared patrons they would not otherwise have had In the language of a successful merchant who has "There is no better investment for those who are in business, and wish to extend it than the money invested in advertising."
