The Court said, the issue is between the parties under the statute of the United States, and the respondent claims that it is unconstitutional. The pravision, is alike applicable to bond and free.
When an officer arrests a fugitive he must indentity the person, and it is only a ministerial act. A togiste from law has a greater chance for escape than a fugitive from labor. Constitutional objecthe courts, and they are settled and binding on this

The statute of 1850 has been decided as constitutional by the Judges of the Supreme Court of Massachaseetts. The commissioner then quoted the words of the Chief Justice on the subject of the right of slaveholders under the law. He referred to the object of the law and the Constitution, and said that it behooved all persons to regard them in the same spirit. It is said that the statue is cruel. and should not be executed. Will those who call it merciles commit its administration to a merciless Judge ? It any wish it, they are more wicked than the statute. I think the statute constitutional, and it remains for me to apply it.

The facts set forth as to the escape and the indentity are all which the Court has to consider; and was in Virginia. On the other side, it has been offered in testimony from many witnesses, to whom no imputation of interest can attach. who declare that the person claimed was in Boston previous to the time he is said to have been in Virginia. Thus there is conflicting evidence on the subject of identity. This case, however, affords evidence of identity. Burns saluted his master by his Christian name, and also Mr. Brent. Burn's conversation with his master was then recited. That a conversation of this kind took place, has been shown. This confirms and establishes the testi-mony of Mr. Brent; and my mind is satisfied as to identity. On the law and facts of the case, the Court consideres the claimant entitled to a certificate from him of a right to the ingitive.

At an early hour in the morning, a company of United States infantry, and a detachment of artillery, with a brass six pounder from the Navy Yard, were stationed to guard the main entrance to the Court house. The crowd assembled rapidly, and by nine o'clock thousands had gathered in the neighthrough certain military evolutions. Meantime, Court street and every avenue leading to the Square, were packed with people. Many stores were closed, and several buildings were festooned with black. An intense feeling was evinced throughout

As early as eleven o'clock, windows, roofs, and every available position to view the departure of the fugitive, were occupied. Thousands of women filled the balconies, and retained possession of the windows in Court and State streets, up to the time of his departure. Business was generally suspended, and many stores closed. After twelve o'clock every avenue leading to Court and State Streets was closed by the military. Much inconvenience was caused to persons who had notes to pay, and even the telegraph messenger boys had to suspend of age.

At a quarter past two o'clock Burns was taken from the Court House, and placed in a hollow square of one hundred special deputies of the United States Marshal, each armed with a curlas

The State troops, under Major General Edmand's embraced the lancers and light dragoons, with a regiment of infantry, and ano her of artillery—altogether one thousand men.

The entire police force of the city was also engaged, and rendered efficient service. As the escort proceeded down Court and State kept the avenue leading thereto, closed file into column, and the full force concentrated on the wharf. Burns was put on board the steamer John Taylor, about three o'clock. The wharves and vessels in the vicinity were crowded with thousands of persons gathered to witness the embarkation. Col Boyed, of the staff, hearing the order, spurred his horse in front of the compamy, and prevented the execution of the order.

Several persons were arrested for disorderly con duct, and three or four badly hart. A well dressed elderly man was conveyed to the hospital, his head being cut open by a sabre.

Cor. FREMONT .- In the late news from Califor nia it was stated that Col Fremont had arrived there with only twenty men, the greatest part of his company having deserted after crossing the Colorado. Col. Benton has written a letter contradicting the desertion story. . He says that Col. Horrible Murder on Long Island

From the New-York Daily Times. Rivernan, (Suffolk County,) Jone 3- 10 A M. A Hornd murder was committed at Cutchogue, last night about midnight at the house of James Wickham, Esq., a retired merchant from your city. The servant girls who lodged in the garret were aroused by screams of "murder," "help," and in-the voice of Mrs Wickham, "Spare our lives." Rushing to the toot of the upper stairs, they crept out through a window upon the roof of the kitchen thence sliding down to a shed, and thence jumping to the ground, ran to alarm the neighb ones first hearing the alarm were Joseph Corwin, Vm. Betts and Dr. Benjamin D Carpenter, who instantly returned with them to the house. The murderer had fled Tracks of blood showed the passage he had taken to escape from the house. A hat was found, to which is recognized as that of an Irishman. Nicholas Dane: In the eleeping room, Mr Wickham was found covered with blood, his head frightfully gashed, clots covering his leatures and the wounds still bleeding. There was not a square inch upon his tace but on which there was a wound. Yet life was not quite extinct. At the hour of the leaving of the cars (nine o'clock,) he was still breathing, though unconscious, and with but the feeblest chance for life. By his side lay the mangled but not quite lifeless body of his wite, Mrs. Frances Wickham, her brains dashed abou the floor, and her blood lying in pools upon the bed and carpet. A few moments more and she had ceased to breathe. A colored boy, Stephen, aged the evidence of the claimant is that Anthony Burns 14 years years, who was a great favorite in the family, was also horribly mutilated. He, too, was alive when the house was entered, and continued so when my informant left.

Circumstances combine to indicate Nicholas Dane as the murderer. He had been in Mr. Wickham's employment until about ten days before, when he was discharged. He had made love to one of the servant girls, and proposed marriage, but was rejected. For this he had sworn revenge on her, and for his discharge, revenge on the family. As nothing was taken from the house, though Mr. W. was a man of property, and much was about to tempt a robber, it seems as if revenge alone was the motive. One of the girls thinks she heard Mrs Wickham exclaim, "Nicholas, don't kill him "-Then the hat found, there could be no mistake about. Dane had been hanging around for some days, but since the murder cannot be found. This man is about six feet high, large boned round shouldered, high cheek bones, red face, and no whiskers; generally walked very fast; usually carried with him a silver watch and steel guard borhood of Court Square.

After the commissioner's decision, Court Square chain. It seems that after his discharge on Wednesday, he hung about the premises, and made use was cleared, and the artillery detachment went of threats towards the girl Ellen for not marrying by Mr and Mrs. Wickham.

On Friday morning he left the house, took his trunk, and went to Greenport. There he left the trunk, and on that night is supposed to have walk-ed back to the residence of Mr. Wickham, a distance of about ten miles, broke into the premises, and no doubt intended to murder all in the house, and would have accomplished the bloody deed had not the girls been awakened by the cries of Mrs. Wickham. Up to the latest account no arrest had been made, and it was supposed that the murderer the monster will be captured. He is about 28 years

The instrument with which this horrible deed was perpetrated, was a post axe, which was iound yes terday morning upon the premises, with blood and hair upon it.

Nicholas Dane, the party suspected of the murder of the family of Mr. Wickham, was arrested in the woods near Hermitage, L. I., at a very early pected that Dane had taken refuge there, and, by strenuous exertions, the culprit was finally secured and safely lodged in jail at Riverhead.

As already mentioned, Justice Osborne detailed

Officers Dowling and Nesmith of this city, to assist in the search for the murderer. At 8 o'clock on Sunday evening, the officers left Riverhead by the Long Island Railroad, on a hand car. On arriving at the station between Riverhead and Cutchogue, they found the people who were engaged in the street to the wharf, the several companies who had search dispersed through the woods, but not effecgree of efficiency to the exertions made for the capture of the culprit, the officers detailed squads o the men who were on duty, and set them to guarding the narrow point between the Bay and Sound. This point was guarded all night, but with no result The most vigilant watch failed to detect any signs of the murderer.

One man reported that at 2 o'clock in the morning, as the moon was going down, he saw a man emerging from the wood, and without stopping to think what he was to do, fired his piece at him, but missed. Nicholas-for it was he that was fired upon-fell back into the wood, and was soon lost to

At last, towards 3 o'clock in the morning, countryman came to officer Dowling, and told him that Nicholas had just been seen crossing the rail road, and making for the woods on the opposite The officer immediately directed the searchers to close up, and fire their guns as a signal to the others to come in, and the party immediately proceeded to surround the swamp in which it was supposed the man was concealed. After a few moments' search. Nicholas was found. His boots on ly were visible. He had covered himself over with leaves and branches, in such a manner as to be completely hidden, with the exception of his

When taken out of the woods, Dane feigned to be in a dying condition. He had made an attempt to commit suicide by cutting his throat, but had failed to make any very serious wound. A large gash was cut in his throat, extending some three or four inches, and of size sufficient to admit three fingers, but the windpipe was not severed, and the wound, accordingly, was not of a nature to end his existence. A razor-case was found a few feet from the place where Nicholas was secreted. When taken up, he allowed his head to fall as one dead and refused to support himself upon his limbs keeping his eyes tightly closed meantime.

Eye-witnesses describe the scene of his capture as one of the most exciting events that has ever transpired in that region. Hundreds of men, with arms in their hands, weary with a night's watching but eager to inflict summary chastisement upon so hardened a wretch, stood eyeing him as a victim already foredoomed. A universal cry of "hang him," "hang him," went up from the multitude.
Their craving for his blood was nearly insatiable The slower justice of the law seemed to some, too lenient for the enormity of the crime. That there was no popular outbreak, is owing to the firm at titude of the officers and the skill with which they managed an operation so difficult and hazardons. The colored boy is dead. Mr. Wickham died on

Hon. G. A. Grow.

It is with equal pride and pleasure that we refer to the course of the Representative in Congress from this District. Throughout the whole of his legislative career, he has never for a moment swerved from the path of duty, or been found advocating a measure of doubtful propriety, or unsound in principle. His consistent and upright conduct has gained him the respect and confidence of his assohim attibuting her refusal to the advice given her ciates, while his eloquence has given him a position and influence seldom attained by a young

But it is principally in reference to his conduc upon the question of the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, of which we wish to speak. Representing a constituency, almost, if not quite unanimous, in opposing that measure, it is natural they should look with some anxiety and interest upon his vote. We take great satisfaction in saying, that was secreted in the woods, or perchance, making he has stood faithful amongst the faithless, and duhia way towards New-York. The inhabitants, however, were out in full force in pursuit, and no doubt memorable struggle, the name of Grow is always ocordod, and always stands upon the side

> In this, Mr. Grow has done no more than his duty. He has done no more than faithfully to carry out the wishes of the Freemen he represents. But it is something in these times to have a faithful Representative. It is a matter of which to be proud that we can point to our Representative, and say, we have a man in Congress, whom no influence could and that Austria and Prussia have taken a more swerve, no paironage corrupt.

That the people of this District, feel this-that they are aware how rare such consistency is-that they are unanimous in applauding the course of their Representative-we have every evidence.-We hear from every side, the popular verdict, Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

While the people are sustaining and applauding Mr. Gaow, we have beard but a single dissenting voice, a discordant tone, among the popular applause. We desire to call public attention to it, because we deem it a matter of great importance that the public should in some way render their verdict upon the subject. We allude to a resolution, adopted at a certain meeting held at this place, on the occasion of the late eclipse, of which we have already given a full account. The resolution reads as follows:-

Resolved, That the National Democrats in this District, although misrepresented in Congress, are cemented by the ties of principle, and with unequalled unanimity, declare their hostility to any and every attempt, emanating from whatever source it may, to divide the democratic party on impractical and abstract issues, or by the exercise of a misapplication of patronage, through Congressional influence, either State or National, in the vain hope of quieting the clamor or retaining the support of factionists, entertaining principles affiliating with the Whigs, and thereby proventing the harmonious action and success of the Democratic party, is alike impolitic

This resolution contains a direct imputation upon the Congressional course of Mr. Grow. It charges ty upon impractical and abstract issues, and with a year. misapplication of the influence of the position he holds. It is upon the issue thus made up, that we wish to see him tried before the people.

The Washington Union is daily declaring that the men who supported the Nebraska outrage must be sustained in their respective districts. Will the Freemen of the North permit those who have steadfastly advocated their interests, to be put down by the clamor of interested and selfish demagogues? Will they be true to those who have been true to them? We believe they will-and we know that it is the wish of nine-tenths of the Freemen of this District to testify at the ballot-box, their appreciation of the honesty and courage and ability of their present Representative. Under the present circumstances, anything short of the return of Mr. Gaow would be a defeat of the principle he has advocated. His re-election is necessary as an endorsement of his course, and as an expression in favor of the cause he has so ably sustained.
