perplexed and confused. Yes," answered the priest. And he briefly communicated to her the contents of the letter he had received, and likewise informed her of other circumstances connected with her history.

A week after this, the priest himself was con ducted before the revolutionary tribunal. His silver hair, his feeble step, his bent form, awakened pity in even those who hated the priesthood. Ve ronica was among the observers in the half. With joy she remarked; that the judge who presided was not the merciless man who had condemned her grand-aunt, but the younger inspector of the prisons, who had shown pity for the prisoners -

This gave her hope.
"Your name!" began the President.

"Alphonse Betrand."
"Your age ?"

"Seventy- (our." "Your former place of residence?"

"Tours," replied the priest.
"Why did you leave that city?"

"To end my days in quetode, it possible."
"I understand you refused to take the eath!"

For a week previous to this incident, greater severity had been shown to the prisoners, and a stricter watch kept over the subordinates of the law. The keeper knew this, and had of late even watched Veronica He had found a small bundle of female attire belonging to her, and he had overheard the prices call her daughter. As a matter of course, he put the worst possible construction the deception of the young girl, and the scare we have mentioned put the finishing stroke to his doubts. He would not endanger his own safety an hour, so he speedily made a report of the case.

The fact—the disgraceful fact, as it was called became known to the public, and was in common circulation when the priest again appeared before his accusers. The hall of judgment was consequently more crowded than on the previous occas-Public opinion was as u-oat, divided. Some were delighted with the boldness of the priest, who had defended his faith with so much daring before the agents of government. Others, again, blamed the President for his leniercy in graning a judicial examination to a theological offender .-The circumstances, which had occurred in the dungeon added to the excitement of the curious. As the azed priest entered, every eye was turned towards him with eager expectation. He was calm and dignified in his bearing, and appeared unconcerned as to the issue of his trial.

"Stand up," began the President: (The priest " Are you now willing to take the oath you have hitherto refused?" demanded the inter-

The President became visibly agitated, and commenced asking a series of questions relative to commenced asking a series of questions relative to the finding of Verbnics. We need not repeat either question or surveits. Suffice to say, that, when ended, the Priesident, instead of continuing the examination of the priest, suddenly on the plea of indisposition, left his seat, and hastened from the half to his own p ivate residence.

Soon after this extraordinary examination, (a the public had sought it,) Veronica was in the house of her father, the President of the Deputation of the National Convention. To add to the aston ishment of the President, he was not long of being informed of the death of his daughter's grand anni and it grieved him that he had not earlier known such singular facts, when, perhaps, he might have had the pleasure of returning good for evil, by saving the life of the unfortunate Madame Dobelle -Veronica almost feared to ask after her mother; she dreaded a painful reply from the silence of her father, as he did not mention her. The presenti ment was too true. Poor Laurn had, after several wars of anxiety and suffering found a grave -When their affairs had taken a mine prosperou turn, she hastened with her husband to Tours, to claim ber child. The joy of Veronica at having found her father was greatly damred by the knowledge, that she never could have the happiness of seeing her mother—that mother who had suffered so much. The resollection of the dead threw a sadness over both the President and his daughter. However, anxie'y for the fate of the priest, to whom they owed so deep a debt of gratinde, banished, for the present, other subjects. As may naturally be supposed, the President felt now doubly anxious for his safety and resolved to risk a great deal to effect his liber take a certain oath, that our country suffers Blood ation, as a proof of the depth of his esteem and heart-felt admiration of the worthy servant of God "Do you think you are in a position to save him? asked Veronica "If so, Tear father, do not let us delay; let us go instantly in search of him. Veronica found herself in the midst of a restless crowd with which she was carried backwards and, forwards, as its waves awayed to said fro. Loud cries of "Let the na ion live,"

"Away with traitors," "Let their blood water the tree of liberty," resonated from every side. The nefactor, and made us of all sorts of arguments to President knew to well what those exclamations intimated, and seized with sudden fear for the fate of the priest, he ran towards the place of execution without waiting for his daughter. The crops in France are also represented as sufficient for do

But the provision crops of this country were planted with a view to an extraordinary European demand. The great grain growing region of the Black Sea was the scene of actual war and commercial interdict, and no sup ply could be furnished from that quarter to the markets of Western and Southern Europe. The surplus must come exclusively from the United States, and it was confidently predicted that prices would rule very high, and the demand upon this country be unprecedented. Under this conviction. a greater breadth of land was planted in breadstuffs and provisions than ever before, and by this means the country has been saved from a serious deficiency of food.

son of E. K. Collins, Mr. Sandford, and many cit-izens of his city, besides more than three hundred of the passengers and crew have met a watery grave. The noble steamer, with her height of tack corpses, is now surging to and fro beneath the surface of the billows of the Atlantic. Leaving printed on my memory.

A.Mr. Corpstock, brother to the commander of the comma for a foture occasion, we hasten to introduce the account farnished us by Mr. George H Burns, the express messenger of Adams & Co, who was on board, and tortunately escaped the terrible perils of

STATEMENT OF MR. BURNS. The steamship Arctic, with 226 passengers, ex-

Of the more than lour handred souls who left Liverpool of the 20th ult. full of hope, gainsy and health, many returning from an European tour of pleasure, only thirty-two me known to have been saved, and certainly not more than one hundred can, by any possibility, have es caped a watery grave.

In addition to all this, another large steamer, freighted with hundreds of human beings, has, in all probability, met a like fate. The details of the horrible disaster are as follows:-On Wednesday, September 27, precisely at 12 o'clock M., in a dense log, we came in contac with a bark rigged iron propeller, with black hull, salmon colored bottom, lead colored prop and boats, and black pipe. She was bound eastward, and had all sail set, with strong, fair wind. The speed of the Arctic at the time was about thirteen knots an hour. The shock to us anneared slight. but the damage to the other vessel was frightful.-Captain Luce instantly ordered the quarter boats cleared away, and the chief mate, boatswain and three sailors went to her relief; before other boats left, the order was countermanded. The Arctic then described a circle twice round the wreck, during which time I caught a glimpse of more than two hundred people clustered on her hurricane

At this juncture it was first ascertained that we had sustained injury, and the water was pooring in at our bows. When the first officer came alongside John A. and last boat was lowered. Dorian, one or two firemen, three of the other passengers saved, and myself, were busily engaged lashing water casks and settees to the main yard, two topgall int yards, and several smaller spars—the Captain, with a number of gentlemen, protecting the work by keeping back the crowd—when a panic seized all or 1945 board, a rush was made, passengers and firemen precipitated themselves headlong over the bulwarks on to the raft, and in a moment our little boat was on to the raft, and in a moment our little boat was full, and in imminent danger of being sunk. It this added an inherent and stern love of right which enty acres, about fifty-five acres improved, co-to the steamer to be cut, and with our hands and axes we paddled from the raft's side. The mate, who throughout preserved great presence of mind, and labored with heroic energy cried out: " For God's rake, Captain, clear the raft, so that we can above water,"

But the sea was now flush with the dead-lights. dashed forward against the pipe. I heard one wild veil, (still ringing in my ears.) and saw the Arctic and the struggling mass rapidly engulphed. Numbers yet clong to the imperfectly constructed raft but, alas, we could render them no aid. Our own situation was no less precarious; and cruel as it eemed, we were forced to abandon them to fate Haaven forbid that I should ever witness such another scene. We however picked up two more men; and then, with an overloaded boat, without oars, tholepins, tood or drink, avoiding with diffi-culty the fragments of the wreck, and passing many dead females, prepared for a night upon the ocean. We secured a floating pumkin and cabbage to guard against immediate starvation, lashed a spar to the bow of our boat to keep her head to the wind and sea, and thus drifted until daylight; the night was cold and foggy, with a heavy swell, and, in a cramped, drenched and half naked condition, we suffered terribly. Without dwelling upon our miseries, alleviated much by the consciousness that we had endeavorsay that at five o'clock on the alternoon of the 28th welespied a sail, and raised a handkerchief to at attention. We were successful With the rude substitute for oars which we had constructed during the day by lashing planks to capstan bare, with a view of attempting to gain land when the sea subsided, we pulled towards the ship. On our way we passed the remnant of the raft, with one man on it apparantly alive.

The bark proved to be the Huron, of St. Andrews, N. B., Capt. A. Wall, bound for Quebec.— Our men safe on board, the noble heared Dorian. with some of the Huron's erew, returned to the raft and rescued the poor fellow who for twenty-six... hours had clung to the spars. He states that after the steamship sunk, he counted seventy two men and four women on the raft, but at 8} o'clock he was the only one alive. In the morning two bod ies were beside him, much eaten by fishes, and at voluntarily dropping into the sea to end his agong-Coming from the raft Dorian encountered and examined the life car of the Arctic. It contained a bottle of water, some cheese and a lady's garment. By the humane captain of the Huron, and Mr. Wellington Cameron, a son of the owner, we were received with great kindness, our wounds dressed, fires kindled, and food and clothing provided in abundance. During the night of the 28th, Captain Wall hung out extra lights, fired rockets, and kept a horn blowing, in hopes of falling in with the remainder of the boats. But his endeavors were fruitless. On the the evening of the 29th he spoke the ship Lebanon, Captain Story, bound for New York, by whom eighteen of our number were taken off, kindly welcomed and well treated. We have this moment reached New York, by pilot boat Christian Berg, No. 16, to which we were transferred from the Lebanon, and to the crew of which we are under great obligations.

The fate of the propeller and our five boats is unknown. If the steamer was, as I have reason to think, the Charity, from Liverpool, she is, I believe built with water tight compartments, or bulkheads, and will float, notwithstanding the damage to her bows. The fact that a boat left, her, which was capsized by our paddles, augurs ill for her buoyant condition, though Captain Wall, of the Huron, on the morning of the 28th saw a singular looking craft far to leeward, but was unable to tell whether she was a steamer or a sailing vessel. He says she had a nondescript appearance, and may have been the wreck of the propeller. Among those whom: I last saw on the quarter

DIED-In this boro' October 6, 1854, of Consumption, preceded by hemorrhage of the lungs, Chan-LOTTE GRAHAM, daughter of Daniel and Jane S.

Bartlett, and sister of Orrin and Harriet. By the decease of this dearly beloved young person, how strongly are we again reminded that " in the midst of life we are in death !" But a few weeks since, in the enjoyment of her usual health-and by her friends deemed increasing health-at a moment officers except the captain and third mate, left the when life seemed radiant with hope, and every promise of future enjoyment, that stern messenger, which has borne so many of earth's young and lovely to the spirit land, was silently approaching, and the first touch of the shadow of that wing which In order to facilitate this latter work the sixth was so soon to fold itself around her, came, in a moment so sudden, so unexpected, as to cast a gloom over our entire village and paralyze those hearts which in her recognized their strongest tie > to earth. To a mind of far more than ordinary strength, and a purity of heart and nobleness of purpose which alwaya characterized and rendered her the idol of Judson Slocum, on the South by Abraham Warden, her immediate friends, the subject of our remarks and Reed Bosworth, and on the West by Abrahir acts and feelings; and of her it may truly be said, and one old framed corn house, and some fruit trees she loved the entire human family, and towards thereon. every member of it entertained the utmost kindness James W. Bosworth vs. Mallory Tyrrell. of feeling; and to a signally self-forgetting nature knew no bounds, and far exceeded her strength, and while still with us sighed to "go Home,"-sighed for that rest prepared for shose that love Him.

Far above all other considerations in point of consolation to her bereaved friends, must ever arise | Sample to the use of Samuel Sample vs. Peter Milthe memory of that thorough knowledge of the great ler and cardinal principles of Christianity, and of her cel of land situated in Albany twp., bounded on the firm reliance upon the hopes held out in the gospel North by lands belonging to the estate of Horation -hopes which enabled her, strongly attached as she Ladd, dec'd., on the East by lands belonging to on the South by lands of South by lands which render life desirable, to meet undismayed, and by lands of Jacob Heverly, and on the west by lands with bright anticipations of future glory, the last of C. Maloney, D. English and Myron Kellogg, consummons of her Lord of Lords and King of Kings.

Devotedly attached to the Episcopal Church, of which she was an ective and efficient member, and nice Lewis and Mary Wilcox vs. Ralph R. Carpento its spirit-enlivening forms, yet ever liberal in her | ter. views, she failed not to recognize the tie of Christian fellowship wheresever found, and regardless of all sectarian considerations, to love those who clad in ed to do our duty to our fellow men, suffice it to the armor of light, were pressing onward for the public highway; containing one acre, be the same crown of Life.

May her virtues be emulated, and the fragrance of their memory distill a balm, healing to those hearts which in their great affliction have left to them far more than ordinary consolution.

DIED-In LeRaysville, on Saturday, September 23. 1854, EPHRIAN H. BROWNING, aged 36 years. At a meeting of LeRays Lodge, No. 416, I. O. of O. F., the following preamble and resolutions was offered by L. B. Pierce, and were unanimously With truth man may say-

" My days are swifter than a weaver's shuttle The living of to-day, become the dead of the morrow.' In as much as it has pleased the alwise disposer ies were beside him, much eaten by fishes, and it of human events, to remove from smong us one of the time he saw our boat he was on the point of our members, the late E. H. Browning, in the prime of life, and in the midst of a course of usefulnessit clearly demonstrates to us that Death is no respecter of persons. And when we reflect upon the many virtues, and the sterling integrity of the departed, thus taken from us by the relentless band of death, we feel that the community at large, as well as the Order of Odd Pellows, have sustained an imparable loss, and one that demands our public tribute of respect. Therefore Resolved, That we deeply and sincerely mourn the death of one who we have so long been wont to look upon, as one who could be trusted alike in ad. versity or prosperity; one with whom the Lodge could trust its dearest interests. Resslved, That we as a Lodge, fully sympathize with his late partner and family, in this truly afflicetive dispensation of Divine Providence, and that we tender them the warmest sympathies of the fraternety.

Resolved, That the members of this Lodge, wear the usual mourning badge thirty days, in respect to the memory of the deceased. Recolved. That the foregoing be published in the County papers.
