LECTURE ON THE HORSE .- Hon. Zadock Pratt, the great American tanner of Prattsville, recently delivered an interesting lecture before the American Institute on The Horse. During the course of the lecture, Col. Pratt entered minutely into the habits and character of the horse ; the proper method of managing him ; the difference between the breed in different countries and nations, and traced his history from the earliest record down to the present time. A good horse he declares as " about fifteen and a half hands high ; the head light and clean made ; wide between the nostrils, and the nostrils themselves large, transparent and open ; broad in the forehead ; eyes prominent, clear and sparkling; cars small, and neatly set on; neck rather short, and well set up ; large arm or shoulder, well thrown back and high ; withers arched and high ; legs fine. flat, thin and small-boned ; body round, and rather light, though sufficiently large to afford substances when it is needed ; full chest, affording ample play for the lungs ; back short, with the hind quarters set on rather obliquely .-

Any one possessing a horse of this make and appearance, and weighing 1,100 or 1,200 pounds may rest assured that they have a horse of all work. * * * The history of the horse can hardly be entered into without obtaining a general knowledge of the various epochs in the history of the world, and in that point of view alone it may be considered a matter of no secondry importance. Though apparently only a research into one branch of natural his tory, it opens a field of examination into the manners and customs of different ages, and exhibits the gradual but sure march of intellect and intelligence from one generation to another. In the management of the animal itself, a profound moral is exemplified for the culture and progress of the human mind ; and like Alexander, he who has the judgment and natural force of will to render subservient the noble and untamed horse, has the power to wield no mean influence upon the age and country in which his lot is cast.

ROUP IN FOWLS .- Of all the diseases that I have had to contend with, I think the roup is the worst. It is contagious. Of this I am perfectly satisfied, that if a fowl in a flock has it, that all will take it, unless the diseased one be removed. Roup is somewhat like the distemper among dogs. My fowls are affected thus: Very difficult in breathing, gaping, rattling in the throat, swelling of the head, feverish, eyes swollen, with a thin, slimy matter oozing from them, and it sometimes closes them up, and blindness is the result. There is a discharge from the nose of a thick, fætid matter, that is offensive to the smell. The fowl is dull and mopy, and suffers much. If taken in time it can be cured, but if suffered to run too long, you better kill the fowl and put it out of misery even if it costs $20. My remedy is as follows .

Take the fowl and put it in a warm place ! wash the head and throat with warm rain water and castile soap ; then take spirits of turpentine and lard, mix well, and rub this mixture on the head and throat thoroughly once a day, and be particular to clean the nostrils well. I have found this remedy to be the best I have ever tried, and I have tried all that are in the different poultry books without doing any good. -Cor. Ohio Cultivator.

To CLEAN GHIT FRAMES .- Take one drachm (about as much as will lay on a shilling) of soft soap, and mix it gradually with half a pint of soft water ; (that is, rain water, or water that has boiled and been allowed to get cold) put the mixture into a bottle, and shake them well together; and add half a wine-glassful of spirits of hartshorn, and again well shake the ingredients. The gilt frame that is cleansed may now be brushed over with this liquid, taking care, however, to use for the purpose the very softest camel's-hair brush that can be procured. After the liquid has been on the frame a minute or so, using a slight brushing to the dirtiest and most intricate parts of the work, it is to be freely washed off with plenty of clean soft water, and allowed to dry of its own accord. The drying should be accelerated by placing the frame in a draught, or where the sun shines on it. Next day the bright parts of the work may be very slightly rubbed with a new wash leather, which enhances their brilliancy. Pictures and glasses should be taken out of the frame during the cleansing process. RAISING CALVES .- Some inquiries being made as to raising calves, I give you my experience. I let them suck until they are two months old -halter-break them when one week old, and let them have as much milk as they will take twice a day until they are about four weeks old ; then begin to wean them off by first milking one teat, and at the end of one week milking two teats, and so on until at last I give them but one teat once a day. As soon as I begin to wean them off. I commence feeding them with a few slices of carrots or some other vegetable, and induce them to lick a little corn meal, increasing the quantity as I deprive them of the milk. They will need the green vegetable no longer after they can procure grass. I always provide them with a small whisp of hay as long as I keep them up. To succeed well, and raise a fine animal, they should have from half to a pint of meal once a day, until they are turned out to grass at one year old. They should also be carded once a day at least during the time of stabling .-Cor. Albany Cultivator.

SALT AND ROOTS FOR MILCH COWS .--- In Stephen's Farmer's Guide, it is stated that it is probably owing to the large amount of common salt in Mangel Wurzel and Turnips, that cows fed exclusively upon them, fall off in milk, an effect likely to be aggravated by the additional use of common salt.  DREADFUL COUGH, DEBILITY, AND LOSS OF APPETITE.
 Dn. HALSEY: Hempstead, Dec. 1, 1847.
 A bottle of your Forest Wine and box of Pills, which I procured of James Carr. (your agent for this place.) has done wonders for me. I had been in a state of decline for more than at year, afflicted with a dreadful cough, pain in the breast, general debility, and loss of appetite. I became almost a skeleton, and had been unable to leave my room for more than two months; my friends told me I had taken, or my physician, until your Wine and Pills were procured. The first dose of the Pills brought up from my stemach, much pilem and greenish matter, and my stools were perfectly black. I then commenced taking your Forest Wine three times a day, my appetite began to return immediately, my cough left me, and in less than two weeks I was almost well. I now enjoy better health than I ever did before, having increased twenty-five pounds in scientify. Yours were off the FIIN CALDWELL.

Dr. G. W. HALSEY :- Dear Sir-Having been cured of Dr. G. W. HALSEY :--Dear Slr.--Having been cured of Dyspepsia by the use of your Forest Wine and Pills, I take the liberty to offer you my name, believing many who know me may be benefited by your excellent remedies.---For many years I have been afflicted with this malady so bably that nearly one-third of my time has been lost from business. The Forest Wine and Pills have restored me to excellent health, and I cheerfully recommend them, as I am convinced the discovery of these remedies are a bles-sing to mankind. J. N. VERMILE. New York, July 9, 1852.

There are thousands cured every year of this disease by the Forest Wine and Pills; Dyspepsia, Costiveness and Indigestion, are kindred complaints, frequently existing together, and the cure of one is generally the cure of all. The Forest Wine and Pills above all remedies are pre-emi-net in the cure of Desrangia
