Muck as a Manure.

Few farmers appreciate the value of swamp muck, and it has been suggested that the greatest reason why it is not turned to better account, is that it is so very abundant, cheap, and easily obtained. There are few farms in many sections of the country which have not enough and to spare, or are situated in near proximity to large deposits of this valuable fertilizer. In looking over the first five years of this journal, we are surprised to find so few accounts of experiments in its use from our farmer readers, though those few show, in a most favorable light, its value as an application to the soil.

One of these experiments reported related to its use, composted with barn-yard manure : upon an old meadow as a top dressing. The yard manure was piled in the field late in the spring, and covered with about one-fifth its quantity of muck. During the summer it was turned and mixed together, and covered with fresh muck, and so remained until snow fell, when 100 loads of the compost were spread upon a five acre meadow, which yielded about six tuns of inferior hay the previous summer. The product the next season was eighteen tuns of first-rate hay,—a very satisfactory result to the experimenter. Perhaps he can now tell us how long the effect of the application continued, and whether other trials have confirmed his opiniou of the value of this material.

But there is abundant testimony as to its practical value. A farmer who has used over 500 loads within four years on a farm of less than 50 acres, says: "I have used meadow muck with very satisfactory results on my dryest land, and never have applied it, (after removing the acidity by lime or exposure to the atmosphere,) without being favorably impressed of its utility on land of sandy loam, applied with or without other vegetable matter." composts largely with yard and stable ma-nures; and thinks so highly of it that he purchased an acre of swamp meadow on purpose to secure muck for fertilizing purposes. Another farmer in one of the Eastern States, repovated a barren tract of land by its use, so that in "fields which formerly would have produced not more than twenty bushels of corn to the acre, he now grows more than eighty. His mowing fields and pastures were, the past season, green and flourishing, while neighboring lots were parched with drought." The following additional statements are from experienced practical men, and may be relied upon. We select them from Prof. Flint's report to the Massachusett's Board of Agriculture. A Middlesex county farmer says: "] use swamp muck most successfully, composted with stable manure, on different varieties of soils, but think it does best on high land of a loamy soil." A Worcester farmer says: "I use it extensively on my hard clay soils; it works well on dry lands to keep them moist and on clay soils to keep them light." An other says : " I have found it a good manure on loamy, gravelly, and sandy land, especially as top-dressing for grass, when composted with stable manure-two parts of muck to one of manure," A Norfolk county farmer values it at $3 per cord, and says it is good for all high lands. One farmer of much experience says that wood ashes is the best article to correct the acidity, sometimes a characteristic of newly dug muck. A farmer from Berkshire county, says: "I have used swamp muck for a number of years past with good results, by mixing it with yard and stable manure in the proportion of one third to one half muck, and consider it worth $1 per load to use for agricultural purposes on soils that are a mixture of loam and gravel."

There can be little doubt in the mind of any thinking and observing farmer, of the value of muck for all soils deficient in vegetable matter, and those who have tried it know and acknowledge its worth, yet many of us who have abundant deposits of valuable muck upon our farms, make little use of it in agriculture. We are either too much driven by work to find time, or do not properly consider the return so sure to be received for a well directed outlay in this direction. But we are improving-this and many other neglected sources of fertility are being drawn upon, and will receive more attention from year to year, as we awake to the true science of practical agriculture .- Rural New Yorker.

Barns.

Those who build now, are pretty generally agreed upon one point; that it is more economical to build one building for the various farm purposes, rather than the great number which are seen so common about old establishments. Let us look at a few figures, which won't lie. A building ten feet square contains one thousand cubic feet. Not to speak of the roof, the outside, presents a surface to the weather of four hundred feet. We have, then, ten feet inside, to four feet outside.

Take another example. A building twenty feet square contains eight thousand cubic feet; the outside measures one thousand six hundred feet. Here we have five feet inside to one foot outside. We will now take a building forty feet square. The inside to the outside is as ten to one!

I am aware that the larger structure requires a heavier frame. that is all. The boards and shingles are the same in either case. I know, too, that the wide roof is worn by rain.

That objection, however, is not of great weight. I hold, Mr. Brown, that one part of a large barn accommodates another part. It is a saving of steps to have your horse near the vehicle in which you wish to attach him. Why go several rods to a ten-footer, and open anothe set of doors in the wind to "get out the chaise?" What comfort, in returning from market or town-meeting on a stormy day, and driving into a snug floor-way, there to untackle and put away horse and wagon, with ease and expedition. There is no difficulty in dispensing with the carriage house; the barn is the place for all the vehicles, the cellar takes in all the carts and coarse wagens-a room at the side of the drive-way the lighter vehicles.

Then what need is there for a separate building for tools ; what place so central as an ample room by the side of the floorway? You start from the barn, usually, to go to different parts of the farm, and you return thither after the work is done. I have thought, Mr. Brown, that portable bins for corn might be put up in this large tool room. In the busy season of the year, corn-bins are apt to get pretty low, so they would not be in the way much when the tools were most used. I should prefer that the bins be where they could be seen to often. One neight stand a better chance then of keeping the rats from destroying the corn.-W. D. B.,

THE ELECTRO CHEMICAL BATH, DIRECT & TO-&-FRO ELECTRO MAGNETIC MACHINE.

DIRECT & TO-&-FRO ELECTRO MAGNETIC MACHINE.

JAMES HARRIS, ELECTRICIAN, of Towanda, respectfully informs the public that he has lately procured from New York the celebrated Electro-Chemical Bath, which has proven to be one of the most important and wonderful discoveries of the age, from its ability to extract minerals from the human system.

Some eight years ago, a physician of Cincinnati discovered the process of extracting minerals from the body, by galvanism; more recently, M. Verges, of New York, an electro-gilder, having suffered from the introduction of poisonous minerals into his system in the prosecution of his art, conceived the idea of removing them by the same processes, he succeeded in doing so, and quickly recovered. He then applied the same means to others similarly affected, with like results. His success exceeded his most sanguine expectations, for not only did these Baths remove mineral poisons, but cured many diseases, some of which were the result of minerals, and some were not.

More recent experiments have fully confirmed the singular power of this Bath to draw from the system all minerals that may be lodged therein, to the great detriment of health. Very often persons are afflicted by diseases which are beyond the comprehension of the most skillid physicians, and which are the effect of poisonous minerals accumulating in the system for years, taken in the shape of calomel, lead, &c. &c.

The following are some of the diseases cured by these baths: Rheumatism, Paralysis, Palsy, Painter's Cholic, Chronic Ulcers, Glandular Swellings, Scrofula, Cancer, Neuralia in all its forms, Salt Rheum and Humors of all kinds.

He has also S. B. Smith's newly invented DIRECT AND

TO-AND-FRO ELECTRO MAGNETIC MACHINE, which is a great improvement on the Magnetic machines heretofore in use. With the aid of the Bath and Machine, we have at command all the available medical efficiency of Electricity. The medical power of the Machine is very great, in introducing niedicines into the system through the pores of the skin—applying it directly to the parts affected, which gives an increase of medicinal power over that of taking it into the stomach, rendering it particularly efficacious in all local diseases.

I am now prepared to apply these Baths, and also the Machines, at my house in the south part of the borough of Towanda, or I will visit patients at a distance, who are unable by reason of disease to come to this place, at moderate prices.
