[From the Dollar Newspaper.] Manures.

Farm-yard manure is generally made up of the solid and liquid excrement of animals, some in a state of decomposition, and the re-mainder fresh and unchanged. There exists a great difference of opinion as to whether it is most advantageous to use long, or fresh manures, rather than that which is completely rotted. The difficulty is capable of adjust-If the intention be only to benefit the immediately succeeding crop, the manure should be completely rotted; but long manure, if plonghed in and covered, is more beneficial to future crops ; it is much preferred for potatoes for rotten manures make them watery and worm-eaten. If the object be to furnish the greatest amount of organic matter to the soil, the sooner the application is made the better. On compact clays the mixture of straw and coarse manure is beneficial, rendering them loose and light, while the products of decomlooser soil. Coarse manure makes loose Surveying.-JAMES A. PAINE, Sarposition are more completely retained than in soils looser and loses more of its elements in tlecomposing ; for this reason compact, fermented manures are best on such soils. For crops which grow rapiply and mature in a short time, well fermented manures and fine composts are more immediately felt ; turnips, Dagnerrean & Glass Picture Gallery, buckwheat, clover, and many garden vegetables, might almost mature before decomposition would be sufficiently advanced in new and coarse manures do to them any benefit. When it is desired to force or quicken a crop, a well fermented or fine heating manure should be used, as rich compost, bone-dust, or manure of horse and sheep. The straw of wheat, oats, &c., contains a mixture of saline substances, which is exceedingly valuable as manures to which is exceedingly valuable as manures to almost every crop; the same is true of their chaff. It is more economical generally to rot the straw and chaff in the barn-yard, instead of dissipating all their volatile matter in the air; when buried dry they decompose slowly, and produce a less sensible effect on the suc-ceeding crop. During fermentation an unaceeding crop. During fermentation an unavoidable loss of organic and of saline matter takes place It is, therefore, theoretically true of dry as well as of green vegetable matter, that it will add most to the soil if ploughed in previous to fermentation. Yet this is not the only consideration for a practical man ; instead of a slow and prolonged action on his crops, he may require an immediate and powerful one for a shorter time, and to obtain this, may be justified in fermenting his straw with the certainty even of a loss. Thus the dispute about the application of long or short manures becomes altogether one of expediency and practical economy. Chaff partakes of the nature of straw, but decomposes even more slowly when buried dry. It is also difficult to ferment even when mixed with liquid manure. The main general difference between vegtable manure of the same kind, cut at the same age, and applied in a green or dry state is this ; the former decomposes more rapidly, and therefore acts more speedily; the total effect in either case will probably be very near the same. But if the yegetable matter had been out at a more advanced stage, or been exposthe former decomposes more rapidly, and ed to the weather while drying, it will no longer exhibit the same efficacy. A ton of dry straw cut green will be much richer than if cut ripe and dry; not only because the green plant contains the materials from which the grain is afterwards formed, but because as the plant ripened it restored to the earth a portion of the salina matters it occurrent action and preach. ger exhibit the same efficacy. A ton of dry straw cut green will be much richer than if of the saline matters it originally extracted .-After it is cut, every shower that falls on it washes out a portion of the salt contained in its pores .- (See Scientific Agriculture by Roits pores.—(See Scientific Agriculture by Ro-gets; Johnston and Brown's Field Book, 223.) All those troublesome pests, the rob-bers of our fields, should be cut down in their greatest vigor and laid in the barn-yard or pig-sty to decay; they are rich in fertilizing salts, and whenever and however applied, are valuable as meanware. THE ELECTRO CHEMICAL BATH, DIRECT & TO-&-FRO ELECTRO MAGNETIC MACHINE.

DIRECT & TO-&-FRO ELECTRO MAGNETIC MACHINE. J AMES HARRIS, ELECTRICIAN, of Towanda, respect-folly informs the public that he has lately procured from New York the celebrated Electro-Chenical Bath, which has proven to be one of the most important and wonderful discoveries of the age, from its ability to extract minerals from the human system. Some eight years ago, a physician of Cincinnati disco-vered the process of extracting minerals from the body, by galvanism ; more recently, M. Verges, of New York, an electro-gilder, having suffered from the introduction of poisonous minerals into his system in the prosecution of his art, conceived the idea of removing them by the same processes, he succeeded in doing so, and quickly recovered. He then applied the same means to others similarly af-fected, with like results. His success exceeded his most sanguine expectations, for not only did these Baths remove mineral poisons, but cured many diseases, some of which were the result of minerals, and some were not. More recent experiments have fully confirmed the sin-gular power of this Bath to draw from the system all mi-nerals that may be lodged therein, to the great detriment gular power of this Bath to draw from the system all mi-nerals that may be lodged therein, to the great detriment of health. Very often persons are afflicted by diseases which are beyond the comprehension of the most skilful physicians, and which are the effect of poissonous mine rals accumulating in the system for years, taken in the shape of calonel, lead, &c. &c. The following are some of the diseases cured by these baths: Rheumatism, Paralysis, Palsy, Painter's Cholic, Chronic Ucers, Glandular Swellings, Scrofula, Cancer, I Neuralia in all its forms, Salt Rheum and Humors of all kinds.

kinds. He has also S. B. Smith's newly invented DIRECT AND TO-AND-FRO ELECTRO MAGNETIC MACHINE, which TO-AND-FRO ELECTRO MAGNETIC MACHINE, which is a great improvement on the Magnetic machines hereto-fore in use. With the aid of the Bath and Machine, we have at command all the available medical efficiency of Electricity. The medical power of the Machine is very great, in introducing medicines into the system through the pores of the skim—applying it directly to the parts af-fected, which gives an increase of medicinal power over that of taking it into the stomach, rendering it particular-ly effications in all local diseases. I am now prepared to apply these Baths, and also the Machines, at my house in the south part of the horough of Towanda, or I will visit patients at a distance, who are unable by reason of disease to come to this place, at mo-derate prices.
