A Dreadful Scene

The London papers by the Canadian, at Quebec, furnish the following particulars of the fatal accident at the Music Hall, Surrey Gardens, while the Rev. Mr. Spurgeon was preaching :

Before the service commenced the enthusiasm within, and even without, the building was in tense. After the preacher had proceeded for some minutes, on a sudden the hysterical scream and subsequent fainting of a female in the gal-lery to the left of Mr. S., and at the farther end of the building, occasioned a commotion, Presently, the people at the doors cried Fire !"-(there really had been a strong called out :--- "The building ! the building is falling !" and then, from above, in the galleries, in the hall, and from all sides, rose a volley of screams and shricks, which were followed by a

The preacher paused in terror. Viewed from the orchestra, the body of the hall presented a scene of dire confusion and agonized excitement. Fortimately, from the floor heing encumbered by seats, a moment's obstruc-tion was given to the rush. That moment saved the lives of many who would have been overwhelmed in tremendous onset toward the loor, and gave time for more tranquil observa-

There a rush was made to the circular-stair case on the right of frightened men, women and children poured, rushing on in terror and impelled from be hind by crowds in still greater alarm. Turning upon the stairs of the second gallery, a slight curve is made by the balastrades. There unfortunately, from the overwhelming pressure the mahogany handrail broke, and the balastrades gave way, one after the other for about three yards. The first who tumbled over was a well dressed woman, who struck upon her head and died without a groan ; the second, another respectably dressed female, who fell screaming in agony, with a child clasped in her arms then came another woman, then two men, and others followed. Meantime, the crowd from the end of the ball below were rashing round the passage, forcing their way outwards over the dead and dying. The groans and screams were such as might be fancied of Pandemonium.
