Farmer's Department.

Get in Root Crops.

We write under the settled conviction that the profits of the general farmer may be more rapidly increased under a judicious cultivation of the various roots, and in any other way ; that more than double the value per acre may be obtained from them than from hay crops, and more even, than from the small grains or Indian corn.

The cultivators of England have long understood this secret, and have became prosperous under its teachings. No man, probably, from this country, ever gave the subject so much at tention as did Mr. Webster, during his mission in England. And few men, in our judgment, have done their country so signal a service as he did by his investigations of this subject, and by promulgation of the facts which he learned. They awakened attention, and the fruits of root crops until after the third week in June. We would prefer a little earlier date.

We are gratified to notice that the cultivation of the sugar beet is beginning to enlist the attention of farmers. Those who have made a trial of it, speak of it in terms of approbation. It is not only very productive, but one of the best roots that can be fed to milch cows and young cattle-causing a rich flow of milk in the former, and great vigor, sprightliness and hardihood in the latter. There is probably no hardihood in the latter. There is probably no climate in the world more admirably adapted to the cultivation of the sugar beet than that of New England. In no case which has fallen under our observation, have those who have planted it failed of securing a paying crop, while in most cases it has yielded a greater profit than any other product of the farm. It should be planted in drills, on good, deep, and rather warm soil, well stimulated with and rather warm soil, well stimulated with rich invigorating manure, and should be carefully hoed and kept clear of weeds. The soil between the rows, and between the roots in the rows, should be kept light, in order to facilitate the absorption of those fertilizing agents from the atmosphere upon which in a very great measure, the perfect development and maturity of the system are found to depend.

A mechanic having a cow, and but a small piece of ground from which derive the means h of sustaining her, cannot do much better than to plant a portion or the whole of it to sugar beets. He will in this way secure more salutary aliment for his animal than in any other way, and at less expense. From eight to thirteen hundred bushels have been taken from mail. an acre, and in several cases the crop has amounted to fifteen hundred. The roots attained a large size, and are very nutricions and wholesome. Swine fatten rapidly on boiled beets, and the pork made on this food is said to be more solid than that made on potatoes or any other root. We would advise every one this season to put in a small plot of this vegetable, and give it a trial .- New England Farmer, March 21.

Of the turnip there is a great variety, and their cultivation is too well understood to need any explanation of ours. cleansing the trees. If there are any spaces to be filled, place them in good trees of choice varieties. Examine the roots of peach trees, if any worms are under the bark, take them out, cover the wounds with earth and let them heal.

GARDEN .- In looking over the beds of asparagus and rhubarb be careful not to injure the crown of the plants. Sow early peas as soon as the ground is sufficiently settled.

If cabbage, tomato and other plants in the hot-bed are disposed to grop up tall and slender, transplant them into other beds that they may become stout, strong and healthy when moved into the open air.

Prune the roots and other shrubbery ; put the grapes in order on trellises.

Early Peas are among the first things to be sown, and this should be done as soon as the frost is out of the ground. Some writers recommend raising pea plants in boxes in hot-beds, and transplant them, but we never found this to pay for the trouble. The best way is to select the warmest, driest soil and the most sheltered position in the garden, and sow in drills (running east and west if possible) two inches deep. Two rows, twenty feet long, will take about one pint of seed, and will be enough of one variety for the first sowing As soon as sown, place a wide board on edge on the north side of each row, inclined over the rows at a slight angle, and support at each end with sticks. This will afford a good shelter, and the ground will become quite warm, having the full benefit of the sun while sheltered from the wind.

These boards may be taken away when the plants are two or three inches high, and the earth drawn to the plants. This drawing of the plants should be repeated several times, as it is a great protection preventing injury from the wind. When eight or ten inches high they should be staked, and of course, the length of the stakes or brush depends upon the variety sown, some sorts growing only two or three feet high, and others five or six feet. The stakes should be placed on both sides of the rows, slanting inwards so that the tops will quite ripe before cutting, and then put it on a from the seed thus tracted more initial initial of the Seed the tracted more initial initializa initial initial initial initial initial initia from the seed thus treated was not injured by s nut.
