good cow may learn to start and run by using her harshly, and running after her and clubbing her when she starts. The contrary will tend to make the wildest cow gentle and kind, but after bad habits are once learned, it is very difficult to overcome them. Nothing can do it but the most untiring perseverance, care and good treatment.

A wild cow can hardly be cured of the habit of starting or running during milking by continuing to milk her in a large open yard or by a fence. If cornered by a fence, she will soon learn the habit of going there and cannot be milked from it. This is not desirable, and such a habit should be avoided. We have always found the following plan successful, and would recommend it to all who have wild cows: Prepare, in some convenient place adjoining the nilking yard, a good, well-fenced pen or euclosure about one rod square. It should be furnished with a pair of bars or gate. should be furnished with a pair of bars or gate, so as to be handy. Into this drive all wild cows, one at time, and after putting up the bars milk them. Do not corner them up, but milk them in the middle of this little place, and use them gently and regularly for a few months, and they will forget all runaway habits, so as to be milked anywhere that you may chance to come up to them with a pail.

This plan is but very little trouble, and it will teach the wildest cow the habit of standing during milking, for they cannot get away. It is very seldom the milker need strike or whip an old cow, they cannot understand for what you whip them, and generally for every whip-The whip should only be used when driving .-Moore's Rural New Yorker, April 4.

Bots in Horses.—An inquiry is made of Dr. Holmes the editor of the "Maine Farmer," about destroying bots on horses. The Docter answers with readiness, and he seems to have a very good idea of such cases which appears in the "Note;"

Not being sure what to do, we concluded to "docter" him as most horses are doctered, viz, by guess, "hit or miss." So we bled him in the mouth. He offered in Towanda, and if experience in the purchase of bled freely, and swallowed much of the blood. We then gave a heavy dose of aloes. Next day the horse was better, and soon after, brought away some bots. The owner of the horse made up a theory, to account for the appearance of the bots. It was this. The bots were induced to let go of the coats of the stomach to partake of the blood, and while so doing, the aloes worked them off. We always supposed, however, that, as it was about the time for them to be transformed into the fly they came away " according to nature," and would have come away at that time, if the blood and the aloes hadn't been swallowed. However, the horse recovered, and we got some credit for skill.

How to MANURE TREES IN GRASS LAND .-Very few persons manure trees growing in sod or grass land, in a judicious or economical manner. The general practice is to dig the manure in, within a diameter of six feet, having the body for the centre. The tree takes its food from the young rootlets, whose mouths extend "just as far on every side as the branches of the tree; hence, this manure applied close to the "body" of the tree is not where the roots can take it up, and of course but little of its value is absorbed by the tree. If you doubt it, just try the experiment on two trees. Serve the one as above named, any the other as follows, viz:

Mark a circle around the tree, having for its outer line the exact radius formed by the overhanging branches; dig on the inner side of this circle a trench two feet wide and one foot deep; mix well rotted manure half and half with the best of the soil, or the earth dug out of a trench with it, then replace the turf and wheel away the refuse or extra earth, rake clean and smooth; you will have a good growth of tree, your fruit larger and more fair, and no unsightly unnatural hillock or mound around the body of the tree .- Ohio Farmer.

FELTON would respectfully inform the public that he is now ready at his old stand, under Hall & Russell's, south side of the public square, to furnish those wanting PURE LIQUORS, with almost everything in that line. He has lately made large additions to his stock, purchasing of the best importers, and in the original package. He has on hand, and for sale in any quantity from a quart upwards:

— Brandy.—Signette, Cogniac, old Hennessy, and Otard. Gin.—Swan, American, and Scheidam Schnapps.

Whiskey.—Scotch, Old Rye, Monongahela and Rectified.

Wine.—Currant. Port, and Brown Sherry.

Fresh Camphene and Buraing Fluid kept constantly on hand. Also 95 per cent. Alcohol.

Cioars of the best brands. Jugs of all sizes; quariflasks, and a large quantity of empty barrels.

Binghanton Ale by the gallon or barrel.

Those favoring me with their patronage may be certain that all articles will be what they are represented.

N. B. The person who borrowed my "Wantage Rod" is requested to return it.
