To Fatten Horses.

Every horseman knows that a horse looks twenty per cent better if fattened in a short time than if several months are employed in the process. I don't believe in loading a horse down with fat—they do better in medium condition. A horse, if not very thin, can be put in fine condition in three weeks But a narrow-headed, yard-necked, narrow-breasted, light-quartered animal, if he has never been fat, will give you a two or three month's task, and he will look better for all the flesh you may put on him.

To fatten a poor horse quickly is no easy tisk. It is to be done by a variety of the best feed, and with close attention in giving it. Many persons feed sufficiently liberal, and yet their horses are low in flesh, simply because of the carelessness and irregular manner in which it is given out. When I wish to fatten a poor horse, I put his stable in a clean and neat condition, and commence by giving him small feeds of corn or oats, (whichever he takes the best,) every two hours from the time of rising in the morning till I retire at night-say six or eight feeds a day retire at night—say six or eight feeds a day—taking care so as to feed that he will always eat with a relish, and be hungry for the next meal. At no time do I suffer his food to lay by him; if he leaves any I take it from him and let him stand till he asks for it. For the first ten days I am careful not to let him get all he will eat. There is no better way of getting a horse's appetite up to the fattening. getting a horse's appetite up to the fattening point than to feed very often of good, clean feed. By paying strict attention for ten days. you will have him fairly under way; and this is the most difficult part of the task. If at any time he gets cloyed, so that he refuses to eat, let him stand till he gets hungry.

During this time his stable must be kept clean and comfortable. He should have a little hay, but as much pure soft water as he will drink three times a day. Salt all the time at his will. He must be curried thoroughly once every day. Few men curry a horse as it should be done. Take your curry-comb firmly in your hand and with it make a quick motion back and forth, pass all over your horse, getting to the skin, and removing the dirt therefrom ; then pass all over more gently with comb and brush, replacing the hair, and finish with the naked hand-putting every hair to its place.

Never give medicine of any kind-you can succed better without. If I wish to reduce a horse in flesh in the least possible time, I should bleed and physic. If you have time to spare, it will better employed in scalding or grinding your grain, and feeding warm mashes, &c. It appears that friend Munson las little faith in our no-doctoring advice. If he finds the oil to answer, I adivse him to stick to it, for if he does nothing worse than to pour a pint of grease down a horse that has a touch of belly-ache, he will hardly loose any. I have known it employed for thirty years-it is like mush to a stone bruise-does no good or harm .- Prarie Farmer.

POTATO BREAD .- A lady correspondent at the West, whom we recognised as a good writer in days of yore, when we were schoolmates together, sends us the directions below. We are partial to well-made "potato bread". It may not be generally known that the starch in potatoes is a healthful and admirable subtitute for "hog's fat" in making bread tender or " short," as well as sweet. We suppose it breaks up and overcomes the toughness of the gluten, abundant in all flour, and especially in that grown at the South.-ED.

" On the afternon preceeding baking day, " small potatoes" can be used. When done, pour off the water; peel and mash them well, stir in from a pint to a quart of flour, according to their moisture, and let it scald ten minutes. Then add sufficent cold water to make the mixture milk-warm. Add the prepared yeast, and let it stand in a warm place over night. A common tin pail answers well for the mixture. In the morning, strain the whole through a coarse seive or cullender into the flour. Stir into stiff sponge or batter, minutes. Then add sufficent cold water to and let it rise; then mix into dough, adding a teaspoonful of salaratus, and as much salt. Leave it in one loaf to rise again, keeping it in a warm place. When light this time, mould into loaves, and put into pans for baking. Now, if not made too hard, it only needs to stand fifteen minutes or half an hrur, before it is ready for the oven. Bake nicely, and you have a loaf worthy of a baker .- American Agriculturist, April.

To PROTECT DRIED FRUITS .- If fruit is put into good linen or cotton bags, and tied up tightly immediately after drying, and baked a couple of times during the season, by putting the bags on a board in the oven moderately warm, keeping them in a dark closet in the meantime the worms will not disturb them. Another excellent way to procure them from worms, is to procure empty liquor barrels and pack them in, after drying in the fall, and cover them up tight, or put them in other barrels, and add a little whiskey or brandy as you fill them up.

ABOUT BEES .- A swarm of bees in their natural state contains from 10,000 to 50,000 of the insects, while in hives they number from 30,000 to 40,000. In a square foot of honeycomb there are about 9,000 cells. A queen bee lays her egg, for fifty or sixty consecutive days, laying about 500 daily. In one season a single queen bee hatches about 100,000 bees. It takes 5,000 bees to weigh a pound.

INDIAN PUDDING .- Take eight table spoonfuls of fine Indian meal; pour into it one quart of boiling milk, with six eggs, one nutmeg, and six ounces of butter. Bake this quantity in three common sized dishes.

Durch Duffer .- (For tea,) one pint of milk three eggs; one cup of butter; a teaspoon of salaratus; flour enough to make a spoon stand in it; half a cup of brewer's yeast. This is better than sally lunn.
