Kohl Rabi.

This is an odd name to many, though not more so than was ru-ta-ba-ga only a few years since. But whatever may be thought of the name, the thing itself is excellent. With us it takes the place of both cabbages and turnips, and is decidedly superior to either of those articles-to our taste and digestion .-Several subscribers have enquired "wnat it's like?" "how it's grown?" "how it's cooked?" how it tastes?" Answer.—Kohl rabi is a kind of turnip cabbage - a cross between the two. Imagine a short cabbage stalk with a round turnip upon the top of it, and about a dozen small, long-stemmed leaves growing out from as many points of the turnip, and you have an idea of "what it's like." It may be grown precisely like a turnip, and quite as easily. If wanted early, start the plants in a hot-bed, and transfer them to the open ground as soon as danger of frost is past. It grows faster than cabbages and is even more hardy. We sowed seed in the open ground where they were to grow without transplanting, on the 8th day of last May, and commenced cooking on the 1st of August. To cook them we sever the heads from the stalk, remove the leaves, cut into quarters, or into six or eight peices, according to the size of the head, and boil in water until cooked through, which may be known by trying them with a fork. They are served up with drawn butter, or cream gravy, similarly to turnips. They are sweeter than cabbage, and more tender and less strong to the taste than most varieties of turnips. find them more agreeable and far more digestible than either cabbages or turnips.

Dig Muck! Dig Muck!!-We have very often referred to the value of muck and swamp mud as fertilizers for all crops, and on all soils not well supplied with organic matter, and especially of the great utility of mixing it in large quantities with the yard manure, but we cannot return to this topic too often. If we accomplish nothing else than to stir up farmers to appropriate to their fields a moiety of the rich stores of organic matter now lying useless in the swamps, swales, and low spots, we shall not labor in vain All these black earths are the remains of plants, and, as we have formerly shown they furnish just the elements to nourish our plants of every kind. If already attended to, now is the time to dig out and pile up large stores of these materials before the ground gets wet. The cariin the later Antumn, or Winter months. Remember that one load of manure and two loads of muck are better than two loads of manure not so treated.

Something about Schools.-We know a man who last summer hired four colts pastured on a farm, some five miles distant. At least once in two weeks he got into a wagon and drove over to see how his juvenile horses fared. He made minute inquiries of the keeper as to their health, their daily watering, &c., he himself examined the condition of the pasture, and when a dry season came on, made spe cial arrangements to have a daily allowance of meal, and he was careful to know that this was regularly supplied.

This man had four children attending school kept in a small building erected at the crossroads. Around this building on three sides ia space of land six feet wide; the fourth side is on a line with the street. There is not a shade tree in sight of the building. Of the interior of the school house, we need not speak. We wish to state one fact only. This owner of those colts, and the father of those children has never been in that school house to inquire after the comfort, health or mental-food daily dealt out to his offspring. In the latter part of the summer we chanced to ask, " who teaches your school?" his reply was, "he did not know, he believed her name was Parker, but he had no time to look after school matters.' -American Agriculturist.

FLORICULTURE .-- The plants being out of the house, there need be little said at this time .-The required attention is in giving water according to their different constitutions and habits. Where there is no rain or river water, it should stand at least one day in buts or cisterus, to take the chilly air from it, and become softened by the surrounding atmosphere. This is more essential to the health of the plants than is generally supposed. The small plants in dry weather will require water evenings and mornings. Give regular syringings as may be required. There are frequently rains continuing for several days, which will materially injure many plants if they are not turned on their sides, or defended by sash or shutters, until the rain is over, especially small plants. The syringings should never be done till after the watering at the roots, and they should never be more seldom than every al ternate evening. Turn all plants frequently, to prevent them from being drawn to one side by the sun or light. Carefully look over them at these turnings, to detect any insects, and observe that the tuberous-rooted or deciduous geraniums are not getting too much water. they being now dormant .- American Farmer.

FEEDING HORSES .- Your remarks in relation FEEDING HORSES.—Your remarks in relation to the amount of hay and grain which a horse will consume per day, have attracted my attention. The actual amount of food consumed by a horse will depend upon his form and disposition. I have that horses of a compact form and quiet disposition, weighing about 1, 200 pounds, and exerting a force equivalent to moving 150 or 200 pounds at the rate of two miles per hour, for ten hours per day, and six days per week, will require each twenty pounds of oats, fourteen pounds of hay and seventy pounds of water, with a comfortable stable, and to keep them in good order. Then also, much of the condition of the horse will depend on his having a driver who knows how to use him without harshness.

This is the conclusion I have arrived at, after thirty years' experience, with a great number of horses on my head, were feeling to disease than any other medicine known to disease than any other medicine known to the world.

As it is frequently expedient that many medicines should be taken under the counsel of an attending Physician, as the could not properly judge of a remedy without knowing its composition, I have suppled the accurate Formulae by which both my Pectoral and Pills are dentally as the whole body of Practitioners in the United States and British American Provinces. CATHARTIC PILLS

A NEW and singularly successful remedy for the cure of all Billious diseases—Costiveness, Indigestion laundice, Dropsy, Rheumatism, Fevers Gout, Humors, Nervoasness, Fritability, Inflamations, Headache, Pains in the Breast, Side, Back, and Limbs, Female Complaints, &c., &c. Indeed very few are the diseases in which a Purgative Medicine is not more or less required, and much sickness and suffering might be prevented, if a harmless but effectual Cathartic were more freely used. No person can feel well while a costive habit of body prevalls pesides it soon generates serious and often fatal diseases, besides it soon generates serious and often fatal diseases which might have been avoided by the timely and judi which might have been avoided by the timely and judi-cious use of a good purgative. This is alike true of Colds, Feverish symptoms, and Billious derangements. They all tend to become or produce the deep seated and for-midable distempers which load the hearses all over the hand. Hence a reliable family physic is of the first im-portance to the public health, and this Pill has been per-fected with consummate skill to meet that demand. A extensive trial of its virtues by Physicians, Professors, and Patients, has shown results surpassing anything hitherto known of any medicine. Cures have been ef-fected beyond belief, were they not substantiated by per-sons of such exalted positions and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth.

Among the eminent gentlemen who have testified in

Among the eminent gentlemen who have testified in avor of these Pills, we may mention:

Did space permit, we could give many hundred certificates from all parts where the Pills have been used, but evidence even more convincing than the experience of eminent public men, is found in their effects upon trial. These Pills, the result of long investigation and study, are offered to the public as the best and most complete which the present state of medical science can afford.—They are compounded not of the drugs themselves, but of the medicinal virtues only of Vegetable remedies extracted by Chemical process in a state of purity, and combined together in such a manner as to insure the best results. This system of composition for medicines has been found in Cherry Pectoral and Pills both, to produce a more efficient remedy than had hitherto been obtained by any process. The reason is perfectly obvious. While by the old mode of composition, every medicine is burdened with more or less of acrimonious and injurious qualities, by this each individual virtue only that is desired for the curative effect is present. All the inert and obnoxious qualities of each substance employed are left behind, the curative virtues only being retained. Hence it is self evident the effects should prove as they have proved, more purely remedial, and the Pills a more powerful an tidote to disease than any other medicine known to the world.
