Fattening Hogs.

The hog, if circumstances are favorable, is inclined to lay up such a supply of fat during autumn as would render it necessary for him to undergo much exercise or exposure during inclement weather. With plenty of lard oil to keep his lamp buruing, he would prefer do-zing in a bed of leaves in the forest, while the ground is covered with snow, rather than to grub daily for a living. He fattens most rap-pidly in such a state of the atmosphere as is most congenial to his comfort-neither too hot nor too cold ; hence the months of September and October are best for making pork. The more agreeable the weather the less in the amonat of food is required to supply the wants of life.

Against fattening hogs so early in the season it may be objected that Indian corn, the crop chiefly depended on for the purpose, is not matured. Taking everything into consideration, it may be better to begin to feed corn before it is ripe-or even at the stage of considerable greenness. After the plant has blossomed it possesses a considerable degree of sweetness-hogs will chew it, swallow the juice, and leave nothing but the dry fibrous matter, which they eject from their months when no more sweetness can be extracted .--They thrive on this fodder, and will continue to eat till the nutriment is concentrated in the ear, and then will eat the cobs and grain together, till the cobb gets hard and dry. Furmers who have practiced this mode of feeding consider it more advantageous than to leave the whole crop to ripen, unless they have a supply of old eorn to feed with. Even in the latter case, it is questionable whether hogs will not do better on corn somewhat green than they would on hard corn, unground.-True, it is not necessary that corn should be fed unground, but much is fed in this condition no doubt at a loss.

In many parts of the country swine are fed considerably on articles which are not readily marletable-as imperfect fruits, vegetables, &c. Where such articles are used, cooking them is generally economical. A mixture of squashes (either summer or winter squashes,) pumpkins-the nearer ripe the better-potatoes, beets and apples, boiled or steamed, and a fourth or an eighth of their bulk of meal stirred in while the mass is hot, forms a dish on which hogs will fatten fast. If skimmed milk or whey can be had, the cooked food may be put with it into a suitable tub or vat, and a slight fermentation allowed to take place hefore the whole is fed out. The animals will eat it with avidity, and, probably, derive more benefit from it than if it had not been fermented. Articles which are of a perishable nature should be used first in fattening swine. in order to prevent waste and turn all the products of the farm to the best account.

Another quite important advantage of early feeding is the less trouble in regard to cooking the food and keeping it in proper condition to feed out. The cooking may be done out of doors, if convenience of feeding would be promoted by it, and there is no expense or trouble to guard the food against freezing .- Boston Cultivator.

THE SINERIAN CRAB.—Every farmer should cultivate this beautiful fruit. A few scions inserted into the limbs of an old tree, or in small branches young ones, will soon afford a liberal supply of fruit, which is an excellent article for preserves and tarts, and brings a high price in the market. The apples are but very little superior in size to the ordinary red cher-ry ; the tree, is remarkably hard, resembles the common apple-tree, and is propagated in much the same way.
