

Farmer's Department.

Fattening Hogs.

The hog, if circumstances are favorable, is inclined to lay up such a supply of fat during autumn as would render it necessary for him to undergo much exercise or exposure during inclement weather.

Against fattening hogs so early in the season it may be objected that Indian corn, the crop chiefly depended on for the purpose, is not matured. Taking everything into consideration, it may be better to begin to feed corn before it is ripe—or even at the stage of considerable greenness.

In many parts of the country swine are fed considerably on articles which are not readily marketable—as imperfect fruits, vegetables, &c. Where such articles are used, cooking them is generally economical.

Another quite important advantage of early feeding is the less trouble in regard to cooking the food and keeping it in proper condition to feed out.

HINTS FOR THE SEASON.—1. You may have hay-stacks, perhaps, standing in your meadows. See that they are well fenced, so that the hay is not eaten up before the proper time.

2. You are, perhaps, threshing your wheat or other grain; save dry under cover all the straw you can. If you have not some under roof, build, if you can, a good stack of it which will shed rain.

3. Look to your wheatefields, sown a few weeks since. Don't let any heavy cattle tread over it. Drain all wet places, if it is not done already.

4. Attend to all fall plowing soon. On clay soils the ground should never, even in the fall, be stirred except when dry.

5. See that the pipes for the pumps, sinks and roofs are all in good condition.

THE SIBERIAN CRAB.—Every farmer should cultivate this beautiful fruit. A few scions inserted into the limbs of an old tree, or in small branches young ones, will soon afford a liberal supply of fruit, which is an excellent article for preserves and tarts, and brings a high price in the market.

As an instance of the extreme hardness of the crab, it is asserted in one of the agricultural papers of Massachusetts, that some limbs were detached from a tree in the spring and having lain exposed to the sun six weeks some scions were cut from them and set, and grew well.

TO PROTECT A SHINGLE ROOF.—Says the editor of the Albany Zwicklerbocker: "A wash composed of lime, and fine sand or wood ashes, renders the roof fifty fold more safe against taking fire from falling cinders or otherwise, in case of fire in the vicinity."

FOOTE once asked a man without a sense of humor, "why are you forever humming that tune?" "Because it haunts me," was the reply. "No wonder," said Foote. "You are forever murdering it."
