Acommodation for Horses.

Now that the Winter is approaching, we have to speak in behalf of that noblest, and most abused of our domestic animals, the horse. That sign, which used to hang out upon country taverns of the old school, "Accommodation for man and beast," was usually a great fraud upon the public, at least in the latter part of its promise. The accommodation for the horse was generally a narrow stall in an overstocked stable, with a hard plank floor, and a mere apology for a bed of straw. Here, after a long day's work upon the road, old Dobbin was expected to refresh his weary limbs. The thing was impracticable in that atmosphere, foul with the breath of twenty other tired horses, and with the effluvia of ammonia coming up from the saturated floors; and upon those hard planks, where the weight of the horse made a firm pressure upon the wearied muscles, as he lay down to sleep.—There was no chance for that relaxation of the muscles, which is as necessary to the brute, as to man.

At home, the horse is a little better off except that the stable was not so full of horses, and he had a better atmosphere to breathe.—There was the same hard bed, and the same pungent smell from the filthy floors. Not one horse in a hundred is properly accommodated in the Winter. In the Summer when turned out to pasture, they resume their natural habits in some measure, and regain their health which is often lost in their Winter confinement. The benefit of the Summer pasture, which is universally conceded by all who have any acquaintance with this treatment, is not owing to the change of food, than to the change of atmosphere and bed. The horse, in his native condition, breaths the pure air of the prairies, and has under his hoof continually the soft turf. When he lies down, it is upon a bed of grass which yields to the pressure of his body, and puts every muscle at ease.

Now, we believe, that all the conditions of the pasture, can be supplied to the horse in his stable, and that he can be kept in the highest health and spirits, in the barn, the year around. We speak now of horses upon the farm, where green fodder is accessible for a part of the year. In the city, though their condition might be ameliorated, it can not be entirely remedied. Natnre gives us the needful hints, if we will but heed her voice.

The horse can have as pure wholesome air in the barn, as he has upon the prairie, without any exposure to the keen winds and storms that assail him in his natural state. Barns are generally constructed, without attention being paid to ventilation. The walls are nearly tight, and not unfrequently the supply of hay is stored in the mows over the stables, so that all the foul odors, escaping from the lungs and bowels of the horse are absorbed by the hay, until it becomes unfit for food. He is compelled to breathe over, many times, this foul air, and finds no relief except when he is taken out of the stable. Is it any wonder, that horses become diseased under this treatment and die prematurely.

A barn should be constructed with ventilators, of a size corresponding to the number of animals it is designed to accommodate, so that the air will be changed as fast as it is breathed. This can be done so that the animals will not be exposed to currents, or suffer from any undue degree of cold.

Again; we can prepare a bed in the stable quite as comfortable, as any horse finds in his grassy pastures. The best bedding we have ever found for a horse, is a coat of dry peat, muck or sods, covered with straw. It should be a foot thick, and the drier the better.—This makes a soft warm bed, and while it accommodates the horse in the best manner, it furnishes in the course of a year an enormous quantity of manure. The straw, and the solid fœces are removed every morning, and all the liquid is immediately absorbed. The stall should be at least six feet wide, and about a half a cord of muck will make a good bed.—This will last nearly two weeks before it becomes so saturated as to emit the smell of ammonia. A horse stable should always be as sweet as a parlor, and it is a constant waste for a man ever to have it otherwise. Of course it requires more labor to furnish a horse with these accommodations, but we know from our own practice of several years, that the labor is abundantly paid for, not only in the health of the horse, but in the manure made by this process. We are confident that no farmer, who adopts this plan and learns its advantages, will ever abandon it.

We have lately seen stables constructed with deep cemented pits under the horse, instead of a plank floor. The pits were four or five feet deep, and would hold perhaps two cords of muck or loam. They were filled with loam to the ordinary level of the floor, and the horses stood directly upon the loam, having a bedding of straw, of course, at night. The advantages of the pits are, that they save expense of flooring, and the muck does not need removing so often. Such stables, of course, have to be upon the ground floor of the barn, and can not be had in all cases.

The bed of muck well covered with straw, and the ventilation, are the things of chief importance, and these are within reach of nearly all farmers. Attention to these things would add greatly to the power of their horses, and to their own pecuniary advantage.

KEEPING POTATOES IN WINTER.—Potatoes spoil in Winter, if buried, from three causes. First and greatest, want of ventilation. Secondly, and nearly allied, dampness. Thirdly, and more rare, freezing. Farmers find most of their potatoes spoiled at the top of the heap where they suppose they become frozen; but this is not the usual cause; the damp, steamy air ascended there, and could not escape, and this spoiled them. A hole made in the top, with a crowbar, and closed with a wisp of straw, would have allowed egress to the confined air, and saved the potatoes.

The best way to secure potatoes outdoors, is to make large heaps, say 50 or 60 bushels; see that they are dry and clean, by digging before wet weather comes on; cover them all over with one foot of packed straw, and three inches of earth. The straw will prevent dampness, and the few inches of earth will favor ventilation. A farmer who raises many potatoes, and practices this mode, does not lose a peck, on the average, in fifty bushels.

☞ A Western paper has discovered some grass from the "path of rectitude." We fear that path must be sadly overgrown with grass, it is so little traveled now-a-days.

☞ There is a lady down east so high-minded that she disdains to own that she has common sense.

CATHARTIC PILLS

A NEW and singularly successful remedy for the cure of all Billious diseases—Costiveness, Indigestion Jaundice, Dropsy, Rheumatism, Fevers, Gout, Humors, Nervousness, Irritability, Inflamations, Headache, Pains in the Breast, Side, Back, and Limbs, Female Complaints, &c., &c. Indeed very few are the diseases in which a Purgative Medicine is not more or less required, and much sickness and suffering might be prevented, if a harmless but effectual Cathartic were more freely used. No person can feel well while a costive habit of body prevails; besides it soon generates serious and often fatal diseases, which might have been avoided by the timely and judicious use of a good purgative. This is alike true of Colds, Feverish symptoms, and Billious derangements. They all tend to become or produce the deep seated and formidable distempers which load the hearses all over the land. Hence a reliable family physic is of the first importance to the public health, and this Pill has been perfected with consummate skill to meet that demand. An extensive trial of its virtues by Physicians, Professors, and Patients, has shown results surpassing anything brtherto known of any medicine. Cures have been effected beyond belief, were they not substantiated by persons of such exalted positions and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth.

Among the eminent gentlemen who have testified in favor of these Pills, we may mention:

Doct. A. A. HAYES, Analytical Chemist of Boston, and State Assayer of Massachusetts, whose high Professional character is endorsed by the—

Hon. EDWARD EVERETT, Senator of the United States.

ROBERT C. WINTHROP, Ex-Speaker of the House of Representatives.

ABBOTT LAWRENCE, Minister Plen. to England.

JOHN B. FITZPATRICK, Catholic Bishop of Boston; also

Dr. J. R. CHILTON, Practical Chemist of New York City, endorsed by

Hon. W. L. MARCY, Secretary of State.

WM. B. ASTOR, the richest man in America.

S. EELAND & Co., Proprietors of the Metropolitan Hotel, and others.

Did space permit, we could give many hundred certificates from all parts where the Pills have been used, but evidence even more convincing than the experience of eminent public men, is found in their effects upon trial.

These Pills, the result of long investigation and study, are offered to the public as the best and most complete which the present state of medical science can afford.—They are compounded not of the drugs themselves, but of the medicinal virtues only of Vegetable remedies extracted by Chemical process in a state of purity, and combined together in such a manner as to insure the best results. This system of composition for medicines has been found in Cherry Pectoral and Pills both, to produce a more efficient remedy than had hitherto been obtained by any process. The reason is perfectly obvious. While by the old mode of composition, every medicine is burdened with more or less of acrimonious and injurious qualities, by this each individual virtue only that is desired for the curative effect is present. All the inert and obnoxious qualities of each substance employed are left behind, the curative virtues only being retained. Hence it is self evident the effects should prove as they have proved, more purely remedial, and the Pills a more powerful antidote to disease than any other medicine known to the world.

As it is frequently expedient that many medicines should be taken under the counsel of an attending Physician, and as he could not properly judge of a remedy without knowing its composition, I have suppled the accurate Formulæ by which both my Pectoral and Pills are made, to the whole body of Practitioners in the United States and British American Provinces. If however there should be any one who has not received them, they will be forwarded by mail to his request.

Of all the Patent Medicines that are offered, how few would be taken it their composition was known! Their life consists in their mystery. I have no mysteries.

The composition of my preparations is laid open to all men, and all who are competent to judge on the subject freely acknowledge their convictions of their intrinsic merits. The Cherry Pectoral was pronounced by scientific men to be a wonderful medicine before its effects were known. Many eminent Physicians have declared the same thing of my Pills, and even more confidently, and are willing to certify that their anticipations were more than realized by their effects upon trial.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Prepared by Dr. Jas. C. Ayer, Practical and Analytical Chemist, Lowell, Mass.
