Farmer's Department.

Look after the Coarse Fodder.

Nothing is more common in the fields and barn-vards of our farmers, than to see quantities of straw, corn-stalks, and coarse litter lying kicking about the cattle's feet, and in piles along the fences, where a little of it is nosed over by the stock, and the rest trodden under foot and wasted.

This is all wrong, and as unnecessary as wrong. Every particle of coarse fodder, even to buckwheat, pea and bean straw, should be carefully foddered out, for in certain portions of the Winter, if the stuff be well saved and clean, the cattle, sheep, and horses will consume it all. If the racks under the sheds are not sufficient to hold it, we build cobble peus of rails, poles, or coarse limbs, in the yards, or adjoining fields, and carry out, or haul with a adjoining fields, and carry out, or may be, the ing implements. wagon, cart, or sled, as the case may be, the ing implements. In the HARDWARE line, Brass, Brittania, Jappaned good weather-not in rain or snow stormswe drive the stock, and never had any difficulty in their eating all, or the most of it, even when they fed on good hay over night in their stables and sheds.

Sometimes, when the straw is not bright. by sprinkling on a little brine the stock will eat it clean, when otherwise they would hardly touch it. It is of no use to say, that such fodder does the stock no good. We know better. Anything that the cattle eat with a relish does do them good. Cold bright weather is the time to feed out of all coarse fodder. and it is wrong to waste a single handful that any creature you have will consume.

SETTING FENCE POSTS .- We hear frequent complaints of the perishableness of fence posts set in the ordinary way. And to the suggestion that the lower ends of the posts should be charred, it is replied that while charring benefits the outside of the timber, it cracks it open so that water penetrates the wood still further, and causes a rapid decay in the interior.

Let us, then, make another suggestion .-Char the lower end of the post for eighteen inches or two feet, so that about six inches of the charred part will be above the surface of the ground. Have in readiness a kettle of hot coal tar, (a cheap article,) and plunge it into the lower end of each post ; or apply it into the crevices. A second application is desirable, as soon as the first becomes dry, and will make the timber water-proof for many years to come.

CURE FOR LICE ON CATTLE, COLTS AND PIGS. -During winter, farm stock are apt to get lar saws. Large sizes up to 60 inch, always on hand and sold at lousy. The following articles will drive away, or kill the lice :

1st. Soft grease, of any kind, and Scotch snuff-an ounce of snuff to a pound of grease -mixed and rubbed in among the hair; on the affected parts. If you have not the snuff, use the grease without it. It will effect a cure. We have tried it.

2d. Powdered charcoal, or coal dust, sifted into the hair.

3d. Ashes from the blacksmith's forge, sifted into the hair.

For lice on swine or pigs. Pour buttemilk along their backs, freely, so that it will trickle in little streams down their sides.

These all have been tried, with entire success, so that no one need have an excuse for lousy stock.

If sheep get ticky during the winter, open the wool along their backs, and sprinkle in a little Scotch snuff, from the head to the tail. A table-spoonful is quite enough for the larg-

TO PREVENT SNOW DRIFTS BY FENCES .-Such drifts are generally caused by an eddy Such drifts are generary caused by an eddy or hill of the wind, occasioned by meeting with high tight fences. To obviate this, one can either take down his fence at the approach of either take down his fence at the approach of Winter, or, what is better, build a very open fence which will not obstruct the wind. A wire fence will answer a very good purpose, but as this does not always work well in other respects, the same end may be gained by building a fence with quite narrow boards. Have them sawed one inch thick and four inches wide. Set the posts firmly, three feet in the ground. Leave a space of three inches between the bottom board and the ground four inches between that and the second board five inches between the second and third, and nine inches between the fourth and fifth -This makes a fence four feet and a few inches high, which answers every purpose of protection, and does not occasion the formation of snow-banks. Considering the great inconvenience, and even danger, caused by drifts, which are often piled up along the highway, in some localities, above the neighboring fences, we think this suggestion an important one.

THE CRANBERRY AS AN ORNAMENTAL PLANT. -No plant of its size can equal the Cranberry in beauty. Its leaves of rich dark green in summer, changed to reddish brown in winter, remain on the plants through the year. The thread-like stalks stand erect and mat close like moss. They would form a border somewhat resembling box, and would require only an occasional trimming off of the runners to keep them in form for years. From the last of June to the 10th July they are in blossom being thickly interspersed with the most beautiful transparent pale pink flowers. The flowers are succeeded, as if by magic, with berries at first green, but soon changing to a bright crimson scarlet, covering the plants in a profusion unequalled by any other fruit, having produced three bushels of berries to the square rod. The berries will remain on the vincs through the year.

I may be enthusiastic, but have never seen any plant that would so soon attract attention as the cranberry plant. When in blossom, its bell-shaped flowers, suspended by a hairlike stem, almost seem the work of some fairy ; and then the berries, two, three, and on some varieties five, attached by the same hair-like stems to the parent stalk, itself only the fifth GEO. H. BUNTING part the size of a straw, excites one's sympathy lest the fruit break the parent stalks, and we at once see the wisdom of their clustering so close together, thereby being enabled to bear their crimson loads of berries.

If the nature of the cranberry was fully understood, it would be found in every " Coun-try Gentleman's" yard as well as in field culture. They draw their sustenance from water a small quantity of which is absolutely necessary to sustain the plants in bearing condition. The air always contains sufficient mois- Block. ture in the proper form for the cranberry plant in any location. H. L. D.-Country CARPETINGS.-All prices superfine and Gentleman, Feb. 5.
