Farmer's Department. Chapters on Cooking, &c.

COOKING MEATS .- On this topic we shall continue to have much to say, so long as one half or more of all the meat used in the country is deprived of its nutriment by cooking it wrongly. Without stopping now to give the reason, we say that all frying of meats is had -decidedly bad. So of potatoes and other articles fried in fat. These substances are indigestible, and worse than innutritious. Broiling, roasting and baking, if not carried too far are perhaps the best modes of cooking fresh meats of all kinds, and most kinds of fish .-The difference in the taste, digestibility and nutritive value of a piece of beef-steak quickly broiled over a lively bed of coals, and the same fried in fat, can hardly be appreciated by those who have only practiced the frying mode, and this includes three-fourths of all the families in the country. If some of one of our female contributers will give us a chapter of full details on broiling meats we shall be glad to publish it, otherwise we will try our hand at it, for there is much to be said on this topic. Reader, do you spoil fish by frying it in lard, or preserve its flavor and sweetness by cook ing it on the grid iron ?

BOILING CORNED BEEF .- This is a staple food in a majority of families during several months every year, and in most cases the cooking may be greatly improved. The two chief errors are, first in not cooking it long enough, and second, in losing a large proportion of its real nutriment. We always prefer it prepared as follows : Soak in warm, not hot water just long enough to take out all excess of Then cover it so that the steam will salt. condense upon the under side of the cover and This will prevent boiling away and fall back. also the loss of much of the nutriment which in an open vessel goes off with the steam .-Boil the meat several hours or until it is so thoroughly done that it will not hold together to be lifted with a fork. If there be any bones take them out, since if cooked enough the meat will cleave from them readily. Pack the meat by itself in a deep dish, mix well together the fat and lean portions. Next skim the fat and boil the liquid down so that when poured over the meat it will just fill the spaces between the pieces. Then lay over whole a flat cover which will fit into the dish, put on a dozen to twenty pound weight and let it stand until cold. Several flat-irons or a large stone will answer for the weight, or if not convenient it may be set under a cheese press .---Prepared in this way, the poorest piece of tough corned beef will be made tender and juicy. Boiling down and using the liquid, saves the most nutritious portion which is usually thrown away. The gelatine of the condensed gravy, when cold forms a solid mass with the meat, which may then be cut into slices for serving upon the table. If the fat and lean portions be mixed, when cut up cold the pieces will present a beautiful marbled appearance. Corned beef prepared in this way will not only be eaten with a superior relish, but it will not, on account of its toughness, be swallowed half masticated to produce irritation in the stomach, and yield only a portion of its substance nutriment. Over the common process, there is only the extra trouble of the additional boiling and pressing, which are amply repaid by the saving of nutriment, while a cheaper quality of beef will be rendered wholesome and profitable. Try this mode and you will not willingly go back to the hard boiled " inevitable salt junk.

NEW ARRANGEMENT.

scarce in many parts of the country, every house-wife should lay in a good stock of dried pumpkins and tomatoes. Pumpkins may be put up in the old fashioned mode of cutting into rings, paring and drying upon poles ; or they may be cut into small pieces, and dried on plates in the sun or oven. A better plan, however, is to pare, stew and strain them, just as if for pies ; then spread the pulp thinly upon earthen dishes, and dry quickly in a hot sun or partially heated oven. If dried slowly there is a danger of souring. Store in a dry room. Kept in this manner they retain much of the freshness and flavor of newly gathered fruit. The dried pulp should be soaked in milk for a few hours before using. In making pics they are greatly improved by stirring the pumpkin into scalding milk, especially it eggs be not used. Tomatoes may be kept in excellent condition by cooking, straining and drying just as described for pumpkins.

PICKLING CABBAGE. - We have used an excellent pickled cabbage, kept in perfect condition for half a year at a time, which was prepared thus : Slice the heads very finely. A head of red cabbage mixed with half a dozen white ones giving the whole a pretty color .--Sprinkle on and mix in a little salt. Scald together, say one gallon of good cider vinegar, two or three tablespoonfuls of sugar, one tablespoonful of cloves, one of ground cinnamon and a tablespoonful or less of ground black pepper. The cloves, cinnamon and pepper ould be put into a bag while scalding .---When cold pour the pickle over the cabbage, and also drop in the bag of spices. Keep the whole well covered, putting a plate over the cabbage to hold it down in the pickle.

SALTING DOWN LIMA BEANS .-- A correspondent says that Lima Beans may be preserved a long time by gathering the pods when they begin to turn yellow, and packing them in kegs with alternate layers of salt. We imagine they would not be very good after this salting process. Perhaps the salt would not strike through the pods to injure the beans themselves. We have always kept them, by picking as soon as they can be shelled, and drying before fully ripe.

ITEM .- " A soldier's funeral is a solemn thing," said sweet Uncle Elijah, to the boys and girls at his house one night. " It's a solemn thing," he said " to be buried under arms."

" I don't think so," said Sarah Jane Podg. " I think it would be real nice to be bu. ers. ried that way."

" No doubt of it," replied Sweet Uncle Elijah, and then Sarah Jane struck Sweet Uncle Elijah with her knittin' work, and told him he was " real hateful."

This happened out on the " Preserve."
