Keep the Stable Floors Clean.

We know divers people who take some pride in their horses and cattle, but who are inveterate slovens in their stables. Their racks or mangers are made so that half the hay they give their stock is wasted and drawn under their feet. They don't clean their stables once a week, or a fortnight. We have, indeed seen stables where valuable animals were kept, not cleaned out for an entire Winter, and the heels of the poor beasts stood a foot higher than their fore feet in the latter part of the season. We once hired a barn-a nice, newly built barn, too-of a man for the Winter and went to put our stock into it, found that the horse stable sill was more than two feet above the ground, and the poor beasts had to leap that high to get into it, and fall down or make a leap every time they went out of it ; and also, that full eighteen inches of solid horse dung had to be thrown out, taking a man half a day to do it before we could use it, besides repairing the entrance by a bridge that they could walk in and out upon. We solded the owner soundly for his laziness—it was nothing else—and had only answered that "he and also, that full eighteen inches of solid nothing else-and had only answered that " he hadn't time to clean it, and didn't see what hurt it did the horses !" And yet, when we came to settle with him in the Spring, he wanted us to pay some dollars extra because we used a part of his barn floor to mix our cut feed upon, on the plea that in wetting our feed for mixing, it rotted his floor during the Win- Dr ter ! His half a dozen loads of horse dung secthing, and fermenting through a long hot Summer, didn't rot the stable floor ! Oh, no. Just so some folks are constituted.

A stable where stock is kept, should be cleaned out once a day, at least, and twice is none too much. In all our stable practice we Build clean the stables twice a day, and shake up the bedding, let the weather be as it will. On the floors of our calf and sheep stables we scatter dry litter. When that gets thoroughly soiled and saturated, we clean it out and supply its place fresh. The ammonia arising from the stale of stock in the stables becomes, in a short time, very offensive to them, as it is to ourselves. It penetrates their lungs and gives them disease. Its pungency affects their eyes, making them sore and irritable, and is a positive injury, to say nothing about the slovenness of laving stables uncean. Cleanliners, indeed, is as necessary to beast as to man. No creature can thrive when fouled and vesmeared with ordure.

When horses (not mares) and oxen stand regularly, holes should be bored through the floor to let their stales run through on to muck below, or into a trench by which it may pass off and be saved. Otherwise, it remains under them to make them uncomfortable when they lie down, unless they have bedding enough to fully absorb it, which is not always convenient. Our own plan of stable flooring is to raise that part on which the animals stand two inches-the thickness of the plank-above the passage behind, and sloping from the foot of the manger back, to give a fall of one to two inches in the distance of six or seven feet of floor on which they stand, to admit the stale to pass off readily, as well as to let the droppings on to the lower level behind them.

Wintering Calves.—Calves should have loose stables, or stalls, to run in during the Winter, with a little yard or paddock for exercise out of doors in fair weather, and plenty of air always. Good soft hay, a few oats, say a pint a day for each, or an equal quantity of corn, oats, or barley meal, and in mild weather a quart of sliced roots is their heat food.

MISS er a quart of sliced roots is their best food. food, and we consider them good for that only, in our Northern climate.

If calves get lousy, rub a little soft grease, mixed with a sprinkling of Scotch snuff, on the affected parts, thoroughly to the skin, and the lice will leave at once. If you have not the suuff, grease alone will do. This is effectual, and the only remedy we have applied for years. Tobacco water we do not like. It often sickens the calves, and is not so certain a Washing, per dozen, care as the grease. Keep the calves warm, dry and clean, and they will come out in the Spring as bright as larks.

WINTERING LAMBS .- The same food and treatment applied to calves will su ceed equally with lambs. If they get ticks upon them, Scotch snuff distributed along the back, by opening the wool and rubbing it well in, will destroy the ticks. Do not crowd too many lambs together, and separate the strong from the weak. All animals are selfish, and have no sympathy for their inferiors. The larger, of whatever kind, over-run the smaller, drive them from their food, and starve them out altogether.

Old, or weakly sheep, may be wintered in the same stables or sheds with lambs ; for, if the old sheep be larger and stronger, lambs are spryer, and can do better dodge about them for their food. They all require fresh air, and plenty of it. Dry cold never hurts a sheep, but rains in Winter are frequently injurious, particularly if of opened wooled varieties, as they soak to the skin and give them severe colds. A severe snow storm, if dry, is less hurtful than a warm rain, and a sleet worse than both together.

VALUE OF CLOVER HAY .- H. CAPRON, Of Illinois, who has been largely concerned in the dairy business, (baving sold $6,000 worth of milk in a single year,) informs us that he H. A. BURBANK'S BAKERY made accurate experiments to test the comparative value of timothy and clover hay .-These experiments extended through a period of two years, were accompanied with accurate weighing and measuring, and the food was changed from timothy to clover, and rice rersa, once a month, and results were that the clover hay uniformly yielded ten per cent, more milk than the timothy. It will be observed that this was not a single expeirment, but a series of experiments extending for a long period.— It is also proper to state that the clover was well cured.
