Early Cutting of Hay.

Some years ago I cut some very good timothy grass before harvest, and before the blossoms had entirely fallen off. It was cured in the very best manner, and placed in a mow to which I could at any time have access. After harvest, and when the seed had became so placed it in a separate mow. At a favorable time (in the following winter) for making a fair experiment, I carried out to my cattle hay from the mow in which I had stored tha which had been cut while green, (before hart rest) and fed to each a separate parcel. After they had fairly commenced feeding upon it, I-carried to each a parcel of the upon it, Iripe as to shell out considerably, I cut the they had fairly commenced feeding upon it, I-earried to each a parcel of that which had been cut after harvest, and from which the seed shelled when it was handled. In every seed shelled when it was handled. In every instance the cattle immediately quit the beau-tiful green hay," and ate up, clean, that which was cut after harvest, before again tonching the former. Indeed, in many instances, they threw from their mouths the green hay, the sooner to get at the other. I repeatedly tried sooner to get at the other. I repeatedly tried the number of the present was the the same experiment, and the result was the same in every instance. The reason of the preference shown by the cattle for the hay cut offer ha rest, I suppose to be thi : i was an h more easily masticated, and sweeter in flavor than the other ; that it retained, in the stems, leaves and seeds, all the nutritive matter which it possessed when green, and probably with some additions, derived from the earth and atmosphere, over and above that of the green hay. The green, early cut hay, although it retained its green and beautiful appearance, was tough and difficult to masticate ; and very probably the crude and unelaborated sap acquired and the state of the crude and unelaborated sap acquired and the state of the green and beautiful appearance is and the green and beautiful appearance is and very probably the crude and unelaborated sap acquired and the state and the crude and unelaborated sap acquired and the state and the crude and unelaborated sap acquired and the state and the crude and unelaborated sap acquired and the state and the crude and unelaborated sap acquired and the crude and unelaborated sap acquired and the state and the crude and unelaborated sap acquired and the crude and unela the same experiment, and the result was the

Be this as it may, the experiments fully satisfied me that the cattle were most fully satisfied me that the cattle there most fond of the later cut hay; that they would eat more of it, and keep in better condition upon it than upon the earlier cut green hay. I have not so perfectly experimented in regard to horses and sheep But I have observed that they always made the same choice with the cattle, when opportunity offered ; no doubt for the same reasons. HOW TO MAKE A BARN YARD .- The best way, in my or pinion, toform a barn-yard for the preservation of manure, without its becoming muddy, where the ground is higher than some of its surrounding parts, is to plough and scrape from the centre to the outside, making a gradual deasent fom the outside to the centre .--Let the fall be one-half foot in ten, and falling a little more as you near the centre. Dig a drain yard, where you can construct a vat to put in leaves, sods, muck, etc., that will absorb and retain the liquid from the yard. The bottom and sides may be formed of plank, or may be more substantially built of stone and mortar The top of the vat should be made so as to guard against rains and surface water as much ! as possible. The drain should fall considerably, and should be made of plank eight inches high and one foot wide inside. The head of the drain should be covered over with a good strong iron grade. The yard ought to be well paved with cobble stone, and with a little pains you can always have a dry yard. The water from the barn and sheds should never be allowed to run into the yard, but should be carried by good cave troughs to a large cistern for the purpose of watering the stock .-- [ Cor Rural New Yorkir.

To DESTROY THE WHITE DAISY .-- I have for read the inquiries of your correspondent as to the best mode of subduing the white daisy, in H. A. BURBANK'S BAKERY answer to which I will say I have found pasturing with sheep effectual : they will devour the blossoms, which, in a few years, will put an end to the weed. By the way, it is an economical way of pasturing sheep, by alternating with other stock this way, one week to to cows, horses, young cattle, &c., the next week the same lot to sheep, and the third week the lot be vacant to recruit ; so by the use of three lots more can be pastured than each continued in the same lot, and the cows, &c., be on fresh feed all the time.
