To the Editor of the American Agriculturist :

This root is one of the most common crops This root is one of the most common crops of the American farmer, and almost every one pretends to know all about it. But to raise superior potatoes, we have much to learn yet, especially as regards its proper treatment to ensure a large crop, even under favorable circumstances. Here the question presents itself—how many bushels is a large crop? This depends much upon the kind, all other things being equal. The best kind, such as the Mercer, is comparatively a small bearer. I think that for the middle of Pnensylvania, 200 bushels per acre of Mercers would be a very large and Spades. els per acre of Mercers would be a very large crop. One thing is sure, that half that quanttity it more frequently obtained. I could never come near 300, much less 500 or 600 bushels, Mops and Washboards, and all other kinds of house-keepwhether that is only paper farming, or whether we common, hardworking Dutchmen are too stupid, I am not ready to say. But I would much rather see it, than hear it said.—
I am here speaking of Mercers only, and when I have 200 bushels, I consider it a full yield from a constant of the see it is that it is a considered in the see it is a full yield from a constant of the see it. from an acre.

Top Dressing Grass Land .- A Yankee implement. In the grazing district, where butter a debatable question whether lands naturally adapted to grass, may not better be kept in good heart by top dressing, than by plowling and reseeding. In Litchfield County, Ct., they have a very ingenious and simple courtivance, combining the advantages of roller and harrow, to aid in the work of top dressing. It is claimed that the manure benefits the land, just as it is made fine and available for the roots of the grasses.

To accomplish this comminution of the stable manure, they spread it upon the surface of the meadow, and go over it repeatedly with this peculiar implement—The frame work is simply
