We gather them in-the nodding plumes Of the vellow and bearded grain, And the flash of our sickles' light illumes Our march o'er the vanquished plain. Anon, we come with the steed drawn car -The cunning of modern laws; And the acres stoop in its clanking jar, As it rocks it hungry jaw.

We gather them in-the mellow fruits From the shrub, the vine and tree, With their russet, and golden, and purple suits, To garnish our treasury. And each has a juicy treasure stored All 'neath its tinted riud, To cheer our guests at the social board,

When we leave our cares behind. We gather them in- in this goodly store, But not with the miser's guest. For the Great Father we adore, Hath but given it in trust ; And our work of death is but for life In the wintry days to come-Then a blessing upon the Reaper's strife, And a shout at his Harvest Home.

The Potato, its History, &c.

A correspondent asks why the potato is called the Irish Potato? To answer this question it will be necessary, and perhaps not unprofitable, to give some of its history. The first potato ever grown in Europe was raised on Sir Walter Raleigh's estate in Ireland, the seed being taken by him from Virginia about 1602. For many years, although eaten, they were grown more as objects of curiosity than profit. Their culture, however, continued to increase, and, during the wars that devasted Ireland towards the end of the seventeenth century, when the growing grain was destroyed by the soldiery, the potato crop served to keep the inhabitants from starvation. It could not be destroyed by fire, and in fact, nothing but digging up the crop could destroy it, which was together too much like work for soldiers, and too long a job, and so the potatoes were left to the hungry people, for which they were, no doubt, very thankful.

After this the potato became very popular in Ireland, and about the year 1694 was introduced into the county of Lancashire, England, when it gradually spread over the adjoining counties, and through all England; but it was not until about the middle of the seventeenth century that the Scotch gave it a trial. Previous to this date, in England, potatoes were grown principally in vegetable gardens, and occupied no prominent place in the field culture. During the latter end of the eighteenth and the beginning of the nineteenth century the potato increased in popularity, and there was a consequent increase in its culture. But, even up to 1812, the limited extent of the crop may be judged from the fact that during that year, when breadstuffs were extremely dear and scarce, the British Parliament were urged by agricultural and political economists and the Mr. CANFIELD DAYTON, Steward. press to recommend, or pass some law requir25, and will continue 14 weeks. ing that every farmer should grow one acre of potatoes for every one hundred acres occupi-

What the original variety first taken from Virginia was, or whether more than one variety, is not known, and it was not until about 1800 that we find much said of different sorts.

In fact, therefore, that a plant gains but slowly in popular favor is no certain evidence that it is not valuable, and we should be careful how we cry out "humbing" at everything new because of apparant failure at first. Some of the new plants lately introduced may ultimately effect a great moral, social and political revolution in this country as did the potato in England.

If the Chinese sugar cane shall enable the farmers of the North to manufacture sugar and molasses so as to supply our markets at a cheap rate, who can calculate the highly moral and social change that will be peacefully effected by it, compared with which the greatest political revolution will sink into in ignificence. We may learn, also, the folly of growing one crop so exclusively as to make its success or failure a matter of such serious importance-almost a question of life and death, instead of a mere matter of profit or loss for a season. We have always urged our farmers to grow a diversity of crops, even where one or two seemed for a time to be the most profitable, and the failure of the wheat crop in the Genesee Valley has proved the wisdom of the

The potato with us is an important crop. It is found every day of the year upon the tables of rich and poor, and is at once a luxury and a necessity. In no part of the country is it grown so extensively, we think, as around Rochester. Immense quantities are shipped every year to New York, as far west as Chicago, and to most of the large cities of Canada West. No crop (excepting fruit) pays as well. In 1854 they averaged one dollar per bushel; in 1855, fifty cents; in 1856 one dollar per bushel; and at the present times are selling at from three to four shillings. Those who grow largely for shipping, generally keep their crop over until spring, when the demand is greater and the price higher than in the fall. For keeping potatoes nothing equals a good cellar, and some of our potato farmers have very fine ones. This is much better and more economical than burying in the ground.

For several years the potato-rot has not been

KIRBY'S MOWER AND REAPER.

WE are manufacturing the above mentioned excellent machine for Eastern Pennsylvania and the neighboring Counties in New York, and invite the particular attention of farmers to the following features of Kirby's Mower and reaper, which we believe to be superior to all others in use, in the following particulars:—It is the lightest in use; strong and durable; simple in construction; easily worked; adapted for horses or oxen; require much less draught than other machines; has no side draught though it cuts a wide swath; will work on rough ground where no other machine can follow it; very difficult to be clogged fn any kind of grass, be it wet or difficult to be clogged in any kind of grass, be it wet or dry; not liable to get out of repair; is composed principally of iron; is a perfect combined machine, working equally well whether moving or reaping; and is the cheapest in price.—Mower being only $100, and the combined Machine $120,—making it altogether the most desirable Mower and Reaper in market.
