Farmer's Departmeut.

The Midge, Fly, Weevil and Rust.

Continued wheat cropping until the silex is exhausted will produce soft, spongy stalks, that will partly invite the attack of fly and rust. It is far more liable to rust, and smnt, and fly, in some soils than in others. As the alkalies and other fertilizing elements become exhausted, its crops of wheat not only become smaller, but the plants fail in constitutional vigor and are more liable to diseases, and to the attacks of parasitic plants and destructive insects. Defects in soil, and improper nutrition, add to these disastrous results. Soils may have all the material necessary to produce a large crop of wheat, but for want of soluble to give it a hard, glossy stem, it will be unable to withstand wet, lodge down, rust, and give harbor to the midge ; and in September and May to the fly. From one hundred to one hundred and fifty pounds of soluble silica are required to glaze the stalks and kernels of an acre of wheat, and three-fourths of it is required in the last sixty days of maturing. This is the time the stalk acquires its solidity and strength. But all the sand in the world will do no good, unless soluble or fiquid, so that the plant can draw it up and use it. All alka line minerals, as potash, soda, lime, magnesia, and ammonia, hasten the solution of the insoluble compounds of silica in the soil. Without some alkaline mineral a crop of wheat may be worthless for want of silica, although the crop grew in a heap of sand. Until it is dissolved and made liquid, it is as foolish to expect wheat to use it, as it is to offer a cake of ice to a horse and tell him to drink. In each case the appropriate substance is present, but not in a and rust, is a soil exhansted by wheat cropping, so that there is not silica sufficient to harden the stem and seed. The remedy, if there is sand or silica in the earth is alkaline minerals to render the sand soluble, so that the sand can be drawn up by the pores of the plant.

As the fly operates in September, one remedy is to sow so late that the fly will be gone before the wheat comes up. As this will prevent the fly from depositing its egg in the fall, the crop will be free from them in the spring. If wheat is sown from the 1st to the 10th of October, there is little danger from the fly ; but it makes the growth so late that it apt to winter kill, and be subject to rust. All varieties of wheat, if sown early, are liable to injury from the fly, and if to avoid this evil, sowing be delayed till late, the plants do not get sufficient root to stand the heaving of the frost and winter kill ; not being glazed early enough to avoid the rust season, in June, they are subject to that evil, as well as the midge. As, in sowing early to avoid the rust the wheat is liable to fly, and in sowing late to avoid the fly we subject it to rust, the great object should be to adopt some measure whereby we may avoid both.

As unsound and unhealthy plants are more subject to fly and rust than are healthy ones, the first object should be to get healthy plants. To insure healthy plants, we must have sound and healthy seed. Kernels broken in threshing, stung by the weevil, affected by the rust, or dwarfed, or shriveled by the injury of the fly to the stalk, should never be sown.

We should have good land, possessing nat nrally or supplied artificially with all the constituents of the wheat crop.

To insure such seed it should all be put in water before it is sown, and what floats on the top is imperfect, and should be skimmed off .--If the kernel is stung, shriveled or defective, the water ordeal will show it. What sinks in the water is sound. It may, however, have

Another remedy is to get a variety of wheat that can be sown so late as to avoid the fly in September, and that would ripen so early as to avoid the rust in June

The Mediterranean is some ten days earlier than any other variety, which usually saves it from the rust. It will also bear to be sown later than any other variety .-- [Ohio Farmer.

DIGGING A WELL .- The month of August is usually the safest time to sink a well. The hot season has then generally dried up the surface streams and springs and left those which percolate deep and silent through the earth in their full and natural flow, and when reached they then searcely fail to yield a permanent supply. Before digging the well, the stone or brick for walling it should be on the ground, and so placed as to be ready at a moment's notice for use, as we have known wells lost, from a sudden break of the earth or rock at the bottom and the rapid flowing in of the water, driving the laberers out, and filling up to a height even above the tools they wrought with. And so strong was the fountain, that they could not exhaust the water afterwards. Such cases do not often happen, we know, but it is well to provide against them, and after water is found in fall supply, the quicker the well is walled up the better .- [American Agriculturist, July.

FALLING FRUITS .- Already the apples, pears and plums are beginning to drop abundantly from the trees. If you examine these, you will discover not a single sound specimen among them. They have fallen, not by the winds, but, quite likely, prematurely from disease .--Cut them open, and you find either eggs, or grubs, already at work upon the substance of the fruit. Every one of these fruits is a pest house, to be immediately destroyed. It is good work for the boys to pick them np, and throw them into the pigstye, where they will be devoured, or rot among the fermenting manures. We are persuaded that the destruction caused by the curculio and by the grubs that prey upon the apples and pears, is caused mainly, by the neglect of this simple precaution. The fallen fruit is suffered to lie upon the ground, and mature its progeny of insects. The next year they swarm in increasing numbers, and the farmer complains that there is something peculiar in his soil and climate ; he cannot grow good fruit. The difficulty is in the man and not in his soil. Pick up the fail SUMMER GOODS, Broadcloths, Cassilen fruit .- [American Agriculturist, July.
