Thrashing Buckwheat.

As this is the month in which buckwheat is usually gathered and thrasher, we have word or two to say on the latter branch of this labor.

It is a long-time custom with some farmers to thrash their buckwheat in the field where it is grown. The reasons for it, as they say, are that it is "handier than to cart it to the barn; it shells out less, and therefore wastes less : and the work is so quickly done that it is altogether better-provided the weather is good. We will not stop to enumerate the mishaps which this proviso is occasionally subjected to in long storms, by which the entire crop is damaged, or lost, but confine the objection to a single item, or two. In the first place if the ground is hard enough to make a thrashing floor without carrying boards, or plank for the purpose, and barricading to keep the grain from flying out by the action of the flails upon it, the grain gets full of grit and dirt, from which it is almost impossible for the faming mill to clean it. And this, with the extra labor laid out upon it, with loss of straw, costs quite as much as the hanl the cut grain to the barn and then do the job up tidily. saving the straw, and getting a good yield of clean seed.

In the second place, if you have a barn, the harvested crop, when sufficiently dry, can be hauled in, and there lay for bad out-of-door weather in which you may thrash it without prejudice to other work which must have fair weather. We prefer a thrashing machine for buckwheat to the flail, provided the straw is not so long, or stout as to clog it. The grain is much cleaner, and for flouring purposes altogether better, as a good deal of the grain is partially hulled by the teeth of the thrasher. Besides this, it is thrashed perfectly clean, and none is left in the straw. After thrashing, let the grain be thinly spread over a floor, till dry. It will yield double the flour, and that of a better quality than when at all moist, besides occasionally getting musty. Save all the straw. It is the best of cattle bedding, besides a makeshift fodder.

NEWLY SEEDED MEADOWS AND PASTURES -Let the season be as it may, there will usually be some spots in newly seeded grass grounds where the Spring or Autumn seeding for some reason has not yet taken well, and they consequely are bare. The month of October, when the September rains revive the withered and feeble growing grass that has suffered in the Summer drouth after the Spring sowing, will show such places where the seed has failed; and now is the time to re-seed them, particularly with timothy, or red top. One method is this : Examine the field closely by walking carefully over it with a bag of seed thrown over the shoulder, taking along a boy with a bundle of small sharpened sticks Wherever a bare spot is found, strew a sufficient quantity of seed, and let the boy drive a stick five or six inches into the ground so that the next Spring's thawing of the Winter frost will not throw it out. The seed will come up this Fall and make growth enough to hold in the ground for the Winter. When the snow goes off in the Spring, as early as possible, go over the land again with a bag of clover seed thy, or red top-and sow that, letting the boy follow and pull up the sticks as he goes. The opening and shutting of the surface of the land by the Spring frosts, will cover the clover seed young growth of the grasses will appear, and future meadow, or pasture be uniformly covered with the young crops of grass. The young growth will probably give but little crop the first season, but will be sure for the year following.

It is quite too common a thing for farmers to turn over their newly seeded fields for another crop of small grains, and a re seeding of grass, because the young grass has apparently failed, when it is only feeble, and has made little Board in the Institute, per week, including fuel and growth by reason of drouth, or otherwise; when with a little patience, and coaxing, the coming mid-summer would show a beautiful sod, and a late harvest of excellent hay.

FALL PASTURE-OCTOBER BUTTER.-We don't like to tell to many secrets; but when we say that October butter, rightly made, is the very best for Winter use of the whole season, we know what we are talking about. We say "rightly made." And that is not simply in setting the milk, skimming off the cream, churuing and working it, and then packing it down, but depends, also, on keeping the cow properly while yielding her milk for the purpose. Some have a notion that mowing grounds, should never be Fall pastured. Such may be, or may not be. We assume, however, that after the hay is carried off, and the meadow has lain open to the after showers of the season, provided it has a thick, close bottom, and not been top-dressed since having, and the grass has again a good stocky growth, none so good use be made of that grass, or the ground it grows on, as to feed it off with some sort of farm stock, which it will be ready to have done, if at all, by the first of October. Then, if you have a lot of butter dairy cows, turn them in. Their milk is then richer in cream than carlier in the season, although the quantity of milk is less. The grass is fresh, clean, solid and rich. Turn them in after the frost is off the grass in the morning, and not before. If it is late in the morning before the frost melts or evapcates, give the cows a snip of hay in the stables or sheds before they go out, and keep them in all night, with a bite of hay before them .-Don't leave them in the field, for they will not eat in a frosty night, and their milk will secrete less in the chilly air than when under shelter. Then your cows are in capital health and condition; their secretions of milk uniform and the quality of the best; and such milk must make good butter, if properly treated after-

HAVE YOU A CHOICE GRAPE CUTTING THAT YOU WANT TO GROW ?- Then go to the woods, dig some roots of a wild grape vine, cut them into pieces of about 6 inches long, cut your choice grape vine, or cutting into pieces of only choice grape vine, or cutting into pieces of only siness he will be able to please all who may favor him one, or at most, two buds; insert the lower end by the common cleft grafting method into the common cleft grafting method into the by the common cleft grafting method, into the pieces of wild root; plant it in the earth, leaving the had of the cutting just level with the top of the ground. Every one so made will grow, and in two years become bearing plants.
