About Drying Apples.

October and November are the best months for drying apples, and the well-ripened, choice, fall varieties, are by far the best for that purpose. Some people have an idea, that anything in the share of an apple, big enough to pare, cut, and core, let the flavor be what it may, it just as good for drying as another. We beg leave to correct this error. It is just as important to have a good apple to dry, as to eat raw, cook, or bake. To those, therefore, who want good dried apples, we will offer a few suggestions.

1st. Let your apples be of good size, fair in shape, choice in flavor-sweet or tart, as you may prefer, but both are good for a variety of purpose. They should be gathered without bruising ; laid by till nearly ripe, but not quite ripe ; pared with a machine-if you have a good one-and quartered, or half quartered according to the size of the fruit, or the use to admirably. Our new be made of the article when dried.

atmosphere, not heated, it begins to lose its aroma, moisture, and flavor, all to the damage of its quality when dried.

3rd. If you choose to string them, which may be done, or not, as you prefer, do it as soon as you can. We should not dry thus, preferring wire racks for the purpose. Then, instead of hanging them up by the side of the TIOGA-POINT FEED CUTTERS, GALE'S PATENT house, in the sun, or in the kitchen, where millions of flies will alight upon, and live on them for several days, put them in a kiln, or drying-room, with a heat of a hundred degrees of thermometer. Lat the kiln be ventilated at the bottom and top, to pass off the exhaling moisture, but not enough to make a pereceptible draught through it.

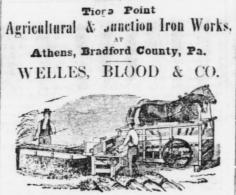

4th. When the drying heat has sufficiently closed the pores of the cut fruit to prevent the escape of its arouna, the heat may be modified ten or twenty degrees, and so continued antil they are sufficiently cured for storing away, which may be known by breaking a few pieces and the absence of any settled moisture in the flesh, showing fermentation.

5th. When sufficiently cured, pack them away in small bags, or sacks made of common cotton sheeting, or light flour sacks, not closely crowded in, but as they will naturally fill ; tie them closely, and hang them to nails on the side of a dry room. They will thus keep indefinitely, or till you want to use, or market them.

A well selected apple, properly pared, cut, cored, and cured, is one of the best luxuries of the table, while indifferent varieties, carelessly worked up, strung and dried in the kitchen, half covered with flies, fused with the steams of cookery, dust, and the accumulations and exhalations of an open, disordered living-room are not fit to eat, nor even to sell. We have seen apples dried after the latter fashion, even in the households of otherwise tidy people; and to those who are in the habit of doing so, we worked up, strung and dried in the kitchen, say, try the other plan, and if they do not acknowledge it a better way, in every possible use an apple can be put to, call upon us, for Farlank's Platform Scales, and Welch & Griffith's Circu the difference in expense.

returning Fall and Spring, the question arises: Which, on the whole, is the best season for transplanting ! We do not propose, now, to discuss the question at length, but merely to state a few general principles.

ed first, is the nature of the soil into which our cd first, is the nature of the soil into which our trees are to be set. If it is wet, and cannot MISS A. ELIZA FRITCHER, Preceptress; MISS EMILLE A. Trees set in such soil in Autumn, get but a slight hold of the earth be-25, and will continue 14 weeks. fore Winter sets in. The stagnant water at the roots not only cankers them, but by alternate the school, and one half at the middle of the term-Fuel freezing and thawing, heaves them out and ex- Primary, per term,.... poses them to the air. And when all this pre-Spring opens, such a tree, if alive, is in a poor condition to make a vigorous growth. If trees must be planted in such soil-which, by the way, we much question-the best way would be to wait antil Spring, or to dig them up in the Fall, " heel them in" in some dry and sheltered spot for the Winter, and set them out as soon as Spring fairly opens. But we must say that, considering the many kinds of Board in the Institute, per week, including fuel and light must say that, considering the many kinds of diseases to which all kinds of trees are subject, we would go without trees—fruit trees, certain ly—rather then set them in a cold, wet soil that cannot be reclaimed. Would it not be better still to sell the uncongenial land, and buy bet-ter if draining cannot be effect d?

The same general principle would apply in the case of planting upon an exposed and bleak site. Trees set out in the Fall, on such land, would be likely to get lashed about or blown over by the winds of Winter, before getting established. Set out in April, the roots would get a pretty firm hold before Autumn came around, and would sustain the tree in its place.

Again : trees whose hardihood is at all doubtful, should not be planted in the fall .-They are not in a condition to resist the cold of winter. Trees are often condemned as tender and the nursery-men who sell them get roundly abused, because the trees perish the first winter after transplanting when they would undoubtedly have lived had they been set out in Spring.

That evergreens of every name should be transplanted only in the Spring, we need not now stop to show. Some of the hardiest kinds may go through the winter safely. after fall planting, but theory and experience testify against the pratice.

With some exceptions like these, we say, work warranted. plant in the Autumn. Hardy trees, such as the apple, cherry and plum, and forest trees generally, set out in good warm soil, gain a decided advantage by this treatment. If set out early in the fall, the ground gets well setout early in the fail, the ground gets wen see tled about the roots, and considerable root growth is made before winter sets in. By this means, they are prepared to endure the cold of winter, and to start forth vigorously in the spring. In fall planting, it is well to throw up a mound of earth a foot high around the trunk to prevent hard freezing of the roots and to keep them firmly in ther place. This precaution will also prevent mice from barking the trees. Large trees and those with short roots should be well tied to stakes, to prevent their being blown over by the winds.
