Draining wet Lands.

Before many years there will be thousands of acres pierced with drains. But the inducements to it which make it wise in England and New England do not yet, generally, exist in the west. The expense of draining one acre would buy two. Many farmers have already more arable land than they can till to advantage. Land redeemed from slough would not pay for itself in many years.

But although a general introduction of draining would not be wise, there are many cases in which to a limited extent, it should be practiced. Lands lying near to cities are sufficiently valuable, and the market for farming products sure enough, to justify the reclaiming of wet pieces of land. On small farms of forty and eighty acres, surrounded by high-priced lands, not easily procured for enlarging his farm if the owner should wish it draining might be employed with advantage. A man with a small farm can afford expenses for high cultivation which would break a large farmer.

Some times a large meadow or arable field is marred by a wet slash through the middle of it : a farmer would not begrudge the labor of draining for the sake of having his favorite field without a blemish. Some times farms are intersected by wet lands, which make the passage from one part of the farm to another difficult at all times, and almost impassable at at some seasons of the year. Draining might be resorted to in such a case, no so much for the sake of the land reclaimed, as for the convenience of the whole farm.

We know pieces of wet, peaty meadow land lying close by the farm-house, the only draw-back to the beauty of the place. A good farmer would wish to recover such a spot for the same reason that he would prefer a handsome house to a homely one-a fine horse over a coarse looking animal-a sightly fence, rather than a clumsy one. There is much string land -but high, flat, and cold -which is wet through all the spring, resisting seed till long after other portions of the farm are at work. and which would, but for this backwardness, be regarded as the best land. If without great expense, such land could be cured, for farmers would mind the trouble or labor.

There are three kinds of draining which may be employed according to circumstances-subsoil-plowing, furrow-draining and ditch draining. When a soil is underbound by a compact. impervious subsoil all the rain or melting snow is retained in the soil until it can exhale and evaporate. For the subsoil acts like a watertight floor, or the bottom of a tub. Subsoilplowing, by thoroughly working through this under crust, gives a downward passage to the moisture : water sinks as it does in sandy loans. Nor will such treatment be less useful to prevent the injury of summer drought; for the depth of soil affords a harbor for roots from whence they can draw moisture when the topsoil is dry as ashes.

But there is a limit put to this treatment by the amount of clay contained in the subsoil .-It has been experimentally ascertained in England, that when the soil contains as high as forty-three per cent. of alumina (clay) subsoilplowing is useless, because the clay soon coalesces and is as impervious as ever. In such cases, if the land has a slight inclination in any direction, furrow-draining may, in some measure, relieve it. The ground is marked out in lands as for sowing grain and plowed with back-furrows, throwing the earth toward the centre. The rain and snow will run to either side, and flow off by the channels left between each strip. This treatment does not relieve the land, to any great extent, of water contained in it, but acts as a preventive, by carrying off the rain and snow before they are absorbed .- H. W. Beecher, in Plain and Pleasant Talk about Fruits, Flowers, and Farming.

Making farm Labor Fashionable -- At the base of the prosperity of any people lies this great principle-make farm labor fashionable at home. Educate, instruct, encourage; and offer all the incentives you can offer, to give interest and dignity to labor at home. Enlist the heart and the intellect of the family in the support of a domestic system that will make labor attractive at the homestead. By means of the powerful influences of early home education, endeavor to invest practical labor with an interest that will cheer the heart of each member of the family, and thereby you will give to your household the grace, peace, refinement and attraction which God designed, a home should possess.

The truth is, we must talk more, think more, work more, and act more, in reference to questions relating to home.

The training and improvement of the physical, intellectual, social and moral powers and sentiments of the youth of our country, require something more than the school-house, academy college and university. The young mind should receive judicious training in the field, in the garden, in the barn, in the workshop, in the parlor, in the kitchen-in a word, around the hearthstone at home.

Whatever intellectual attainments your son may have acquired, he is unfit to go forth into society if he has not had thrown around him the genial and purifying influences of parents. sisters, brothers, and the man-saving influence of the family government. The nation must look for virtue, wisdom, and strength, to the education that controls and shapes the home policy of the family circle. There can be no love of country where there is no love of home. Patriotism, true and genuine, the only kind worthy of the name, derives its mighty strength from the fountains that gush out around the hearthstone; and those who forget to cherish the household interests, will soon learn to look with indifference upon the interests of their common country. We must cultivate the roots-not the tops We must make the family government, the school, the farm, the church, the shop, the agricultural fairs, the laboratories of our future greatness. We must educate our sons to be farmers, artizans, architects, engineers, geologists, botanists, chemists--in a word, practical men. Their eyes must be turned from Washington to their States, counties, townships, districts, homes. This is true patrictism; and the only patriotism that will perpetually preserve the nation .- Gov. Wright.

THE best stock a man can invest in is the stock of a farm; the best shares are plowsbares; and the best banks are the fertile banks of the rural stream ; the more these are broken the better dividends they pay .-- H. W.

Spinage seed should be got ready to be sown in September, if you wish a good supply of this choicest of all spring greens.
