THE BEST KIND OF HAY .- There is probably as much difference in the nutritive properties, of the grasses, as there is in grains or fruits .--indicates quite as much. Analysis may not always agree with instinct, but, in the main, the animal taste verifies the decisions of the laboratory. Thus, herd's grass stands among the best varieties of grass according to the chemists, and cattle show a decided preference for it, when it is put in competition with other kinds.

Some farmers seed all their land, both meadow and pasture, with herd's-grass. They say that all cattle are not only more fond of it, but We shall scoa close our business as a firm, and we are de they fatten more rapidly than upon any other grass. In confirmation of this, the writer noticed this Fall, in turning in heifers to eat up CHEAPER FOR CASH the after-feed upon a meadow seeded with several grasses, that the herd's-grass patches were the favorite feeding ground. Some of the second growth of this grass had gone to seed, and though past its prime, it was grazed more closely than any other part of the field. As the cattle have the grass and hay to eat, it is but fair that their appetites should be suited with the best.

VARIETY IN THE FOOD OF ANIMALS .- NO man is contented with the same dish for dinner every day, neither will be thrive as well for confining himself to one article of diet, however wholesome it may be. The Creator has provided a constant variety of ripening fruits and grain to correspond with man's desire for change. Animals have the same want and to some extent the same provision. The ox ranges over the field to find out different varieties of grass. Animals in the yard will nose over the refuse heap to pick out something different from their accustomed food. The pig turns from his regular meal of corn, to root for nuts, bulbs, and other tit-bits. These facts should be kept in mind in the Winter care of stock. An alternation of roots, cut feed, oil meal, etc., with an occasional treat of grain and shorts, will please their palates, keep up appetite, promote digestion and general thrift. Hogs as well as other animals need such a change .---The sweepings of the barn, which contains clover heads, seeds, bits of hay and straw, etc., should be thrown into the pen where they will be eagerly devoured, and will contribute not a little to the health as well as the comfort of the animals.

Nothing is easier than for any man, even one of strong mind, to render himself insane by forever dwelling upon one idea and disregarding all the other multifarious duties which God has required of him in this life.

Cheerfulness is perfectly consistent with piety.
