of independent freeholders. The proposition to change our land policy so as to accomplish so desirable a result, by securing to the pioneer a home on the public domain at the bare cost of survey and transfer, is often rejected by those who have given but little thought to the subject as leveling and agrarian. When was there even an effort made, since the world began, to wrest from power its ill-gotten gains, or to restore to man his inalienable rights, but it has been met with the shout of leveling and agrarian? That is the alarm cry of the devotee of the past, with which he ever strives to prevent all reforms or innovations upon established usages. Behind such a bulwark old abuses intrench themselves, and attempt to maintain their position by hurling against every assailant terms of odium and reproach, made so by the coloring of the adherents of prerogative and power. Until within a very recent period the chroniclers of the race have been, for the most part, sycophants of power; and, being the allies of the State, have glossed over its cotemporaneous despotism and wrongs, while they have written down the true defenders of the rights of the people and the champions of honorable labor as the outlaws of history.

Because the Roman Gracchi proposed to elevate the Roman citizen, by dignifying his labor and restoring him to the rights of which he had been unjustly deprived by the oligarchy who controll the State, their name was made synonymous with infamy; as arch disturbers of all that was good in society, till Niebuhr tore off the vail of two thousand years of obloquy, and vindicated to future times their memories as true defenders of the rights of the people, and advocates of the best interests | Hides will be received in payment. and glory of their country. Such has been the fate of the world's reformers. Is it not time that we learned wisdom from the chronicles of the past, and ceased a blind reverence for customs or institutions, because of their gray age? Why should not the American statesman adapt the legislation of the country to the developement of material resources, the promotion of its industrial interests, and there dignify its labor, and make strong the prime elements of national power?

Let this vast domain, then, be set apart and consecrated forever as a patrimony to the sons of toil : close your land office forever against the speculator, and thereby prevent the capital of the country from seeking that kind of investment, of absorbing the hard earnings of labor, without rendering an equivalent. While the laborer is thus crushed by this system established by the Government, which abstracts so large an amount from his earnings for the benefit of the speculator, in addition to all the other disadvantages that ever beset the unequal struggle between the bones and sinews of men and dollars and cents. what wonder is it that misery and want so often sit at his fireside, and penury and sorrow surround his deathbed?

While the pioneer spirit goes forth into the wilderness, snatching new areas from the wild beasts and bequeathing them a legacy to civlized man, let not the Gevernment damper his ardor and palsy his arm by legislation that places him in the power of soulless capital and grasping speculation; for upon his wild battle field these are the only foes that his own stern heart and right arm cannot vanquish.
