The Championship.

Our readers and the public generally will hail with delight the announcement we now make that on Friday last Tom Sayers and his gallant opponent met by appointment in our office, and settled their dispute in the most friendly manner. Sayers was accompanied by Mr. Gideon and two other friends, and Jack Macdonald appeared as adviser of Heenan.

Several propositions were made on both sides, in the presence of all parties, which, however, ended in smoke. The first proposal on behalf of Heenan was that the old belt should be cut in half, that each should take a moiety, and that each belt should be made complete by subscriptions raised by either side. Savers at once replied to this that he would not consent to give up the old belt, or any part thereof, adding he would rather die in the ring than allow any portion of it to go out of the country. We then suggested Tom should resign the old belt into our hands to be fought for by other aspirants, and that each champion should head a subscription to purchase a facsimile to be handed to his adversary. We represented that the feeling in the country was unanimous, especially among the higher classes that both men had done enough for honor and renown; that by agreeing to this propesition neither would be giving a point to his adversary, and that it would be a method of settling the affair which would meet with general approbation. Heenan at once assented to this, but Sayers, after conferring with one of his friends, said he would give Heenan a new belt but would prefer keeping his own, for which he had fought so long. This was was another hitch. It was clearly Heenan's object that Tom should not have the original, or, at any rate, the whole of it, as he considered this would be tantamount to a defeat; and at this stage of the proceedings we had fears that after all no amicable arrangement would be made. It then occurred to us that, if the men were left alone with us, and allowed to state their own individual wishes, unbiassed by the opinions of others, in all probability we could put them together. A hint was sufficient : the friends of both instantly left our sanctum, and in five minutes the men shook hands in the most friendly way possible, and agreed to our proposal that each should have a new belt, that the old one should be left with us. and that in the event of Heenan's thinking nit to remain in this country and defend it against all comers for three years, it should become his own. Tom undertook not to put in any further claims for it, intimating that he should now retire from the Ring, and leave its fortunes and its vicissitudes for younger men .-Heenan, in a few well-expressed words, said he had always respected our champion as a brave man, and one of the wonders of the age; he had come over to try whether he could lick him, and he was bound to acknowledge he found in him an adversary quite as good, or even better, than he expected, and he might add, now that the question of the belt was done away with, what he could not have said publicly before, viz. : that even had he defeated Tom Sayers in the Ring, it was his intention to have given the belt right back to him on the spot, feeling it would have been far from manly on his part to have deprived so good a man of his hard-earned trophy after waiving his rights so far as to allow him a chance of trying for it. Tom replied in suitable terms, that he had always respected Heenan; he looked upon him as a brave man, and the best he had ever met, and he considered him in every way worthy to uphold the position of Champion of England should he feel disposed so to do.

THE CROPS .- Generally the intelligence in regard to the crops is very encouraging. The long drouth which threatened a famine in the Northwest has been broken by copious rains. "The fields are green, the fruit trees are in bloom already, verdure has commenced luxuriant growth, and all nature looks refreshed and perspiration. He was a single man, 36 years of age, an invigorated." The Milwaukee News says "if Irishman by birth, and bore a very good character. the pleasant weather continues but a short time longer, no fears need be entertained that M'Manigal, while engaged with others in "jumping" of the harvest which is to follow will far exceed leaping trials, inflicted an internal injury on himself, in bounty and fruitfulness its predecessors for many years." The St. Paul (Minnesota) Pioneer is informed by a gentleman who has travelled over large portions of Minnesota, that all sorts of crops are in a better condition than ever before known at that season of the year, and more than double the amount of ground is under cultivation than last year. In Kansas the prospect is not so favorable : the drouth continues, and its bad effects are very severely felt. The prospect is good in Iowa. The rve harvest will be very large. The Michigan papers speak of the wheat crop as looking remarkably well. Short crops are predicted in Kentucky. The Louisville Journal says, "We hear many complaints about wheat in this State." Grain and fruit promise well in Pennsylvania. The Pittsburg Journal thinks the fruit crop in the Western section of the State will be unprecedented. The wheat crop never looked better throughout the State, and is advancing finely the crops in New York are also flourishing finely, KACLED BY THE TORNADO .- Netty Jones, daughter of E. Jones, late of Elmira, was instantly killed at Portsmouth, Ohio, by the falling of a wall upon her, during the terrible tornado which visited other cities at the West, on the 21st inst. Mr. Jones and the balance of his family escaped uninjured. Nettie Jones was an interesting child, about five years old, and her many acquaintances here will be shocked to hear of her sudden death.

-Mr. Jones' dwelling was badly injured by the tornado, and about half his furniture and household goods destroyed. The damage done in Plymouth by the tornado is estimated at $100,000 .- Elmira Press.

SENATOR DOUGLAS' HOUSE UNROOFED .- A severe thunder storm accompanied by wind, on last Sunday evening, in Washington City, unroofed Mr. Douglas' residence and caused the died two days afterwards in great agony. interior of the house to be seriously damaged by water. Political old woman say it is ominous of the scalping, Douglas will get by the political storm at Baltimore on the 18th of FLATTERING SIGNS .- There is but one Bell and Everett paper in this State, the Philadelphia Evening Journal. In New Jersey all the Fillmore papers of '56 have come out in favor of Lincoln and Hamlin, while in New-York we know of but one which refuses to support the Republican nominations. The home organ of Mr. Fillmore the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser, in an able well-written editorial, assigns lin flag. In Delaware the ablest Fillmore journals are warmly endorsing the Chicago pominations.

We announce with painful regret the sudden death of our friend and neighbor, J. Hust, jr., who died at his esidence, in Chilo, on Wednesday afternoon last, the 9th inst., of Inflammation of the Lungs. Mr. H. made his arrangements on Thursday last to attend the meeting of the Poet's Union at Richmond, but not feeling very well thought he would lay down and rest till the boat came down, but failing to get better, he gave up his trip, and from that time to the day of his death (six days after) he grew worse constantly, yet not so as to be confined to is bed all of the time. But a very few moments before his death he was up, and at the window. His death will be deeply felt by all who knew him. As a poet he had no superior; as a business man, a long and active practice for years, had made him a master hand; as a father and husband, he was ever gentle, kind and affectionate, and as a man, in the broad sense of the term, he was beloved by all who knew him. We deeply sympathize with his wife and family, who have so recently been called upon to follow to the grave three of their number .- as it will be remembered that the family lost two children but a few months since."

TAKING THE CENSUS .- Friday last was the day fixed upon for the Deputy Marshals to take the Census. Under the Act of Congress it is made the duty of amount adjudged, and also $966,98 for costs, from the company, removed a rail with the the manufacturer, the farmer, the mechanic, and all othintention of precipitating the train into the ers, to impart to the Marshal all the information required; and we doubt not that our citizens, who have just reason to be proud of their statistics, will furnish the desired facts when called upon. For the purpose of enabling our readers to answer the interrogatories satisfactorily, we present a synopsis of the law showing the information necessary to be given :-

PERSONS,-Name of every person whose usual place of abode on the first day of June, 1860, was in your family; profession, occupation, of each male person over fifteen years of age; place of birth-naming the State, Territory or country; whether deaf, dumb, blind, insane idiotic, pauper or convict; whether married] within the year; whether attended school within the year; persons over twenty years of age who cannot read and write; and the value of real estate owned by each individual.

AGRICULTURAL.-How many acres of land improved and unimproved; cash value of farm; value of farming implements and machinery; number and value of horses, des, asses, working oxen, milch cows and other cattle sheep and swine; amount and value produced during the year ending June, 1860; of animals slaughtered; wheat, rye, Indian corn, oats, wool, buckwheat, barley, market garden produce, butter, cheese, hay, clover seed, other INDUSTRIAL .- Name of business, manufacture, of product; capital invested in personal and real estate: in business; quantity, kind and value of raw materials sed, including fuel; kind of motive power, structure or source; average number of male and female hands employed; average monthly cost of male and female labors espectively; quantity, kind and value of animal product.

A refusal to answer the questions propounded, subjects a person to a penalty of $30, to be sued for and recovered by the Marshal for the use of the United States. We trust that a proper feeling of local pride will induce every one to answer the questions truly and fully; and we doubt not that the result will show an increase of wealth and population in our town and county that will much surprise people abroad as well as the mass of our own citizens.

Personal Inpressions of Lincoln.—A correspondent of the New-York Post thus speaks of "the coming man."

" Lincoln received us with great, and to me, surprising urbanity. I had seen him before in New-York, and brought with me an impression of his awkward and ungainly manner; but in his own house, where he doubtless feels himself freer than in the strange New-York circles he had thrown this off, and appeared easy, if not graceful. He is a tall, lank man, with a long neck, and his ordinary movements are unusually angular, even out West. His conversation is fluent, agreeable and polite. You see at once from it that he is a man of decided and original character. His views are all his own ; such as he has worked out from a patient and varied serutiny of life, and not such as he has learned from others. Yet he cannot be called opinionated.

One thing Mr. Lincoln remarked which I will venture to repeat. He said that in the coming Presidential campaign he was wholly uncommitted to any cabals or cliques, and that he meant to keep himself free from them, and from all pledges and promises.

Mr. Lincoln's early life, as you know, was passed in the roughest kind of experience on the frontier, and among the roughest sort of people. Yet, I have been told, that in the face of all these influences he is a strictly temperate man, never using wine or strong drink and stranger still, ne does not 'twist the filthy weed,' nor smoke, nor use profane language of any kind. When we consider how common these are all over our country, particularly in the West, it must be admitted that it exhibits no little strength of character to have refrained from them.

"Mr. Lineoln is popular with his friends and neighbors; the habitual equity of his mind points him out as a peace-maker and composer of difficulties; his integrity is proverbial; and his legal abilities are regarded as of the highest order. The soubriquet of 'Honest old Abe,' has been won by years of upright conduct, and is the popular homage to his probity.— He carries the marks of honesty in his face and entire deportment."

-It is well known to those who know anything on the subject that no President has ever yet entered upon the duties of his office so unincumbered by piedges with regard to appointments as Mr. Lincoln will be when his is inaugurated in March next. On this subject The Chicago Press and Tribune has some highly interesting statements. According to that journal, on Monday preceding the nomination one of Mr. Lineoln's trusted friends addressed him a note, telling him that his prospects were improving, but that at the last moment, it might be necessary to say a word here and a word there for securing the support of certain interests; and the writer of the note asked that he, with two other friends when he named might be empowered to "negotiate," if negotiations should become necessary. We saw Mr. Lincoln's reply. It was worthy of Washington. He said, "No, gentlemen; I have not asked the nomination, and I will not now buy it with pledges. If I am nominated and elected, I shall not go into the Presidency as the tool of this man or that, or the property of any faction or clique." It is proper, adds The Press and Tribune, that our Republican friends East and West should understand that he has not made and will not make any pledges of any kind by which his action in the distribution of public patronage will be clogged or embarrassed if he is elected. We mean that he has made no promise of any sort for any purpose whatever; and if we know the man, he will go through the canvass as he has begun it fit of the wiseacres who have already organized his Cabinet, appointed his Foreign Ministers, and generally distributed the patronage which will fall into his hands, and for the benefit, further, of the patriotic gentlemen who will be impelled to make a journey to Springfield for the purpose of magnifying their services, past and prospective, and securing at the same time a promise of reward for what they have done or expect to do.

A fire occurred in Wilkes Barre in the early part of last week. The buildings between the county jail and the Slocum property, next to the American Hotel, are reported to have been burned. Loss, $20,000.
