

FIRST RIDE OF THE JAPANESE BY RAILROAD.
The ride of the Japanese across the Isthmus of Panama, their first railway experience, is described in a letter in the New York Journal of Commerce:
"Upon the starting of the train, the first the Japanese had ever seen, and the first cars they had ever entered, the conductor put the train at moderate speed, which was gradually increased till it shot forward like an arrow, climbing, descending, winding along the valleys, dashing across the iron bridges of the Chagres, high conical hills, equaling small mountains, rising on either hand, covered with trees and verdure to their utmost summits, while numerous clusters of the more miserable huts lined the way, crowded with people of all hues, indolent, stupid and half clothed, while the pigs and children sported at the doors in company, and equally naked. The Japanese could not suppress their admiration at this new mode of conveyance and rate of progress, so unlike the nomadism of their own country, in which they were carried on the shoulders of men. It was amusing to see the attempts of the artists to sketch scenes and objects when the train was at the top of its speed, and the poor artist, ignorant of the rate of motion, taking his eye for one instant only from the object to his paper, giving place to others which had the same apparition existence. At last they were obliged to desist, and gave themselves up to the gratification of sight-seeing only."
