In Behalf of Farmers' Boys.

Farmer, did you ever think what a long some business farming can be, and often is, made for your boys, just by your unavailability? Do you talk with your sons as you go to and from and while at work? Or do you work in dreary, uncheered silence, unless a neighbor chances to come along or help you a day, and then suddenly recover the faculty of speech and flow of spirits? Do you know your boy's subject of thought? His pet plans and would he confide to your or advise with you about any new plan or idea? Do you complain that your son "takes no interest" in your work and at the same time do you take no interest in his plans for pleasure and profit? Do you help him make his bow and arrow, or his trucks or his sled? Or does he have to construct these out of your sight and enjoy them by stealth, for fear of receiving a reprimand from you for this waste of time? Do you commend his good endeavors, or do you reprimand him on every slight occasion, without any manifestation of your appreciation of his diligence at other times?

There is nothing so terribly discouraging as this perpetual fault finding without any commendation, and yet, who can not call to mind many fathers who so rarely commend their sons, that it is thought to be said ironically when by chance a word of satisfaction with their conduct is uttered. Farmers boys feel this from the fact that they are almost constantly with their fathers. They can not, like village boys, meet companions at night after their work is done, and have a good time, nor can they every few days see some show, firemen's parade, or entertaining curiosity, that may serve them for subject of thought when at work in silence. The farm is their world, and if the farmer does not try hard to make himself the companion of his boys, to not only seem, but to be interested in whatever interests his sons, to make the hours of work a pleasant sojourn time instead of a silent, dreary drag and, if he does not by consulting with them, and asking for and talking over with them their plans and suggestions, and by proper commendation, encourage them to better efforts in the future, why should he be surprised to learn some morning that his son had become tired of farming, and "stepped out" to try the broad untried world outside?

How many fathers, whose boys leave home just as soon as they can, might justly blame only their own reserve for their sons' discontent. Boys are very much like men, and how can they be contented and happy while working day after day in silence, only when the parental mouth is opened to reprimand some error of omission or commission? No one wonders that the slaves of the south feel no interest in their work; and many a father treats his boys, so far as companionship is concerned, just as if they were slaves. He does not do this because he does not love his boy, though it seems so to the child; but he has "put away childish things" so far that he does not appreciate the feeling of youth, and then the boy is his own, and he does not feel under any social obligation to him. I verily believe that boys who live out will average to be more contented, than farmers' boys who live at home so far as companionship with and commendation from the father is concerned.

Let any one observe in his own neighborhood, or still better, observe carefully his own boys, and he will at once be convinced there is here a great evil, and one to be especially observed in the farming community. People who labor hard are apt to become cold and reserved. Farm work is usually very suggestive of a most pleasant and instructive interchange of words, and in the quiet monotony of hoeing one hill after another the father forgets that the son is not as old as himself, with a lifetime of recollections for his mind to feed upon.

Think of this thing, fathers, and observe you sons' conduct, and if you find that he feels any more confidence that he shall find sympathy and encouragement and assistance from you, your duty to him as a father has been neglected.

SENDING POULTRY TO MARKET.—Messrs. Briggs & Helfrich, of New-York, sends us the following directions for dressing, packing, and forwarding poultry to market:

First see that all poultry is well fattened, as the difference in price in our market between fat and poor poultry is very great. Remember that you not only get pay for every pound your poultry gains in fattening, but by improving the quality you gain from one-fourth to one-half in price on the whole.

In fattening poultry, it is always the best economy to feed all they will eat. Poultry fed on corn is yellower and better than on buckwheat.

Keep from food before killing a sufficient length of time so that the crop will be nearly or quite empty, as full crops are quite detrimental.

The best mode of killing is by opening the neck veins, though the head may be cut off, but, if so, the skin should be drawn over the neck bone and tied after dressing.

All poultry should be scalded just enough to make it pick easy. The water should be nearly boiling hot; dip the poultry in it and raise it out two or three times, so as to scald evenly, then pick off all the quills, feathers and pin feathers as quick as possible without breaking the skin. Don't rub them off, as that rubs off the thin outside skin, which injures the sale. Next, immediately before it cools, dip it into clean hot water; hold it in but a few seconds, then suddenly dip it into cold water for a few seconds more, then hang or lay it up to cool and dry.

The intestines or crop should not be drawn. Be sure it is all entirely cool through and the surface dry before being packed.

Boxes are best to pack in, though barrels will do. Obtain bright rye straw, if possible, wheat or oat straw, if very bright and clean, will do, but is not as good. Shake out all the dust, place a layer in the box, then a layer of poultry, pack up, with the legs flat on the straw; put a little of the straw next the side of the box, then in the same manner alternate layers of straw and poultry. Stow very snug, so it cannot move; put straw on the top, press on the lid, and nail strong. If the weather is warm, use plenty of dry straw.—Genesee Farmer.

STARTING A BATTLE HORSE.—A correspondent describes what to him was a novel way of cutting a balky horse: "Fasten a strong rope to his tail; let it between his legs; then attach a team to the rope and give the word, forward march!"

CAUTION.
"To be, or not to be,—that is the question!" Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer the slings and arrows of outrageous opposition, Or by taking up arms against a sea of printing ink, And opposing, end them!"

THE proprietor of the Argus takes occasion to advise that his Bindery to indulge in an uncalled for fling about a "part of a concern," which is hoping to delude the public. As a consequence a Bindery on my premises, the inference is that if the public bring their binding to me, they are in no danger of being defrauded. For two years I have worked for Mr. Parsons, and he has taken great pains to satisfy the public with the "best Binder in America," as the columns of the Argus will testify. It has been all that time "deluding the public" if he has been engaged in a fraud, he has been a principal. I refer to my work during that time as evidence that there has been no fraud practiced.
Having served a long apprenticeship at the Bindery business, I have resumed business here on my own account, as I know of nothing which prevents me from following a legitimate and lawful calling for my support. I shall endeavor to give work and attention to my business to give public satisfaction.
