SURRENDER OF FORT PULASKI BALTIMORE, April 15, 1862.

The Savannah Republican of the 12th, annonnces the surrender of Fort Pulaski on the previous day. Several large embrasures were made in the wall by our batteries at Kingston, of Parrott guns and all the Barbet guns on that side-and eight casemate guns were dismounted. Three balls entered the magazine. Col. Almstead, rebel commander, said that the day previous our fire was so terrible that no human being could stand on the parapet for a moment.

THE GREAT BATTLE.

We publish in another part of to day's paper, a brief account of the great battle of Pittsburg Landing-the greatest battle ever fought on this continent, and terminated in the total route of the enemy, and complete success of the Union forces.

Our force were stationed in the form of semicircle--the centre in front of the main trict of Columbia, and in answer to Messrs. road to Corinth, the left wing extending to the Tennessee River, and the right wing re-

The battle was opened by the rebels next morning (Monday) at 7 o'clock, and in half an hour it raged along the whole line. The enemy labored desperately to find some weak points in our lines ; but he found the task hopeless. Suddenly both wings of our army were turned upon the enemy; and he began to fall back, retreating, however, in order. He was driven beyond our lines, and made for Corinth, harrassed by our cavalry .-And so ended the great Battle of Pittsburg Landing. The forces engaged in the last day's battle are estimated at 70,000 on each side.

THE BATTLE AT PITTSBURG.

Our Loss Officially Reported at 7,000.

Loss of the Enemy Much Greater.

GENS. BEAUREGARD AND JONSTON KILLED.

CINCINNATI, April 10. A correspondent of the Times writes the following account of the Pittsburg battle :

Our forces were stationed in the form of a semi circle, the right resting on a point north of Crump's Landing, our centre being in front of the main road to Corinth, and our left extending to the river in the direction of Hambargh, four miles north of Pittsburg Landing. At 2 o'clock, on the morning of the 6th, four hundred men of Gen. Prentiss' Division were attacked by the enemy, half a mile in advance of our lines. Our men fell back on the Twenty Fifth Missouri, swiftly pursued by the enemy. The advance of the rebels reached

Col. Peabody's Brigade just as the long roll was sounded, and the men were falling into line. Resistance was but short, and they retreated under a galling fire, until they reached the lines of the Second Division:

At 6 o'clock the attack had become general along our whole front. The enemy, in large numbers, drove in the pickets of Gen. Sherman's Division, and fell on the Forty-Eighth. Fiftieth and Seventy-Second Ohio Regiments, Those troops were never before in action, and, being so unexpectedly attacked, made as able a resistance as possible, but were, in common with the forces of Gen. Prentiss, forced to seek the support of the troops immediately in their rear.

At 10 o'clock the entire line on both sides were fully engaged-the roar of cannon and musketry was without intermission from the main centre to a point extending half way down the left wing. The rebels made a des perate charge on the Fourteenth Ohio battery, which, not being sufficiently supported by infantry, fell into their hands. Another severe fight occurred for possession of the Fifth Ohio battery, and three of its guns were taken by the enemy.

By 11 o'clock, a number of commanders of regiments had falled, and in some cases not a single field officer remained ; yet the fighting ontinued with an earnestness which showed that the contest on both sides was for death or victory. Foot by foot the ground was contested, and finding it impossible to drive back our centre, the enemy slackened their fire, and made vigorous efforts on our left wing, endeavoring to outflank and drive it to the river bank. This wing was under Gen. Harlburt, and was composed of the Fourteenth, Thirty-Second, Forty Fourth and Fifty Seventh Indi ana; Eighth, Eighteenth and Twenty First Illinois. Fronting its line, however, was the Fourteenth, Fifty-Seventh and Seventy Seventh Ohio, and Fifth Ohio Cavalry of Gen. Sher man's Division. For nearly two hours a sheet of fire blazed from both columns, the rebels ighting with a vigor that was only equaled by those contending with them.

While the contest raged the bottest, the gunboat Tyler passed up the river to a point pposite the enemy, and poured in broadsides rom her immense guns, greatly aiding in forcing the enemy back. Up to three o'clock he battle raged with a fury that defies description. The rebels had found every attempt to break our lines unavailing They had striven to drive in our main column, and finding that impossible, had turned all their strength upon our left. Foiled in that quarter, they now made another attempt at our centre, is untrue and made every effort to route our forces before the reinforcements which had been sent for should come up.

At 5 o'clock there was a short cessation in he fire of the enemy their lines falling back secession floating batteries, as the Merrimac for nearly half a mile, when they suddenly at Norfolk, and Hollin's Turtle at New Or- wheeled, and again threw, their entire forces upon our left wing, determined to make a final struggle in that quarter, but the gunboats Ty ler and Lexington poured in their shot thick and fast, with terrible effect. Meanwhile Gen. Wallace, who had taken a circuitous route from Crump's Landing, appeared suddenly on the enemy's right wing .---In the face of this combination of circumstances, the rebels felt that their enterprise for the day was a failure, and as night was approachas foll ws : ing, fell back until they reached an advantageous position somewhat in the rear, yet occupy. ing the main road to Corinth. The gunboats continued to throw shells at them until they were out of range. After a wearied watching of several hours of intense anxiety, the advance regiments of Gen. Buell appeared on the opposite bank of the river. The work of passing the river began, the Thirty-Sixth Indiana and Sixty-Eighth Ohio being the first to cross, followed by the main portions of Gens. Nelson and Bruce's Divisions. Cheer after cheer greeted their arrival, and they were immediately sent to the advance, where they rested on their arms for nobly. the night. All night long steamers were engaged forrying Gen. Buell's force across, and when daylight broke, it was evident the rebels, too, had been strongly reinforced. The battle was opened by the rebels at 7 o'clock, from the Corinth road, and in half an hour extended along the whole line. At 9 o'clock the sound of artillery and musketry fully equalled that of the previous day. The enemy was met by our reinforcements and the still unwearied soldiers of yesterday, with an in sight. energy they certainly could not have expected. It became evident they were avoiding the extreme of our left wing, and endeavoring, with perseverence and determination, to find some weak point by which to turn our force. nate them. They left one point but to return to it immediand must consequently make a very efficient ately, and then as suddenly would, by some masterly stroke of Generalship, direct a most vigorous attack upon some division where they storms. fancied they would not be expected ; but the fire of our lines was as steady as clock-work, and it soon became evident that the enemy considered the task they had undertaken a hopeless one. Further reinforcements now began to arrive, and took position on the right of the main centre, under Gen. Wallace. Gens. Grant, Buell, Nel-on, Sherman and Crittenden were everywhere present, directing movements for a new stroke on the enemy. Suddenly both wings of our army were turned upon the enemy, with the intention of driving them into an extensive ravine. At the same time a powerful battery, stationed in the open field, poured volley after volley of canister into the rebel At half-past eleven o'clock the roar of the rounds, and the Merrimac one round, when fired with all the energy that the prospect of land the enemy's defeat inspired, while the rebels' fire was not so vigorous, and they evinced a de sire to withdraw. They finally fell slowly back, keeping up a fire from their artillery and musketry along their whole column as they re treated. They went in excellent order, bat-tling at every advantageous point, and delivering their fire with considerable effect ; but from all the divisions of our lines they were closely pursued, a galling fire being kept upon theil rear. The enemy had now been driven beyond our former lines, and were in full retreat for Corinth, pursued by our cavalry. The forces engaged on both sides in this day's battle are estimated at about 70,000 each.

CAIRO, April 10, 1862.

Our loss at the sanguinary battle near Pittsburg, Tenn., is officially reported to be 7,000 killed and wounded. The loss of the enemy is much greater. They were utterly routed, after the most determined and desperate resistance, on the second day. Albert Sydney Johnston's body was found on the field after the Rebels had run and left everything calculated to impede their flight. Gen. Halleck has just left here for Pittsburg.

An arrival from Pittsburg Landing says that the Rebels, in making the first attack on Sunday morning, carried the Stars and Stripes, and wore the Union uniform.

Gen. Bragg is reported to have been killed. Provisional Governor Johnson of Kentucky is wounded, and was taken prisoner. It is stated that Gen. Prentiss escaped in the confusion of the Rebels' retreat on the second day's fight.

Our total loss is about 7,000. This is the estimate of the military commanders who were in the engagement. Of this number about 2,000 were taken prisoners, the balance are killed and wounded in the usual proportions. Gen. Wallace of Illinois was reported dead, as it was thought impossible that he could live. He was, however, living on Wednesday, and improving. He was shot in the back of the ear, the bullet coming out of his nose. During the day, Johnson (one of the very first Genarals in the Rebel ranks,) was shot dead by a cannon ball, and his body left in our possession. Beauregerd had one arm shot
