Haying Time.

In the present month, begins the great hay harvest. This is, is many respects, the most important in the whole year. Although the ctop does not fill the space in the public eye, as an article of foreign commerce, which cotton does, it is yet of greater money value. Think of its fundamental use, the support of all kinds of farm-stock for six or seven months of the whole year. As one says : "It is in fact, the basis of all farm operations, the key stone which sustains them and gives them all their success. The test of a farm is the number of eattle it feeds, and the eattle in turn feed the soil." Let us, then, see to it that our crop this year is well and seasonably made and properly stored.

In preparing for this annual campaign, be sure that all other pressing labor is out of the way. This work is enough of itself to occupy one's time and thoughts while it lasts ; to have other cares superadded, harrasses and perplexes one so much as to make his true and proper work very disagreeable. Get all other matters well ahead, so as to feel at ease about them. Then, see that the tools and implements are in complete order-scythes, grindstones, mowing-machines, hand rakes, horserakes, pitch forks, wagons, racks, and hay-caps. The extra hired help-is that engaged ?enough of it ?-- and of such a sort to be reliable ?

The best time to cut hay, is an important matter to determine. The end sought in gathering hay is, obviously, to cut it when it contains its most nutritive properties, viz : Mucilage, starch, gluten and sugar, in the best state for their preservation. Experience shows that that period is when the grass is just in full flower. After this time, the fiber becomes woody and indigestible. The Cyclo pædia of Agriculture says : "It has teen proved that plants of nearly all sorts, if cut when in full vigor afterwords carefully dried without any waste of their nutritive juices contain nearly double the quantity of nourish ing matter which they do when allowed to attain their full growth, and make some progress towards decay." Yet some good farmers hold that Timothy should not be cut until it passes this stage, and has nearly rippened its seed ? · and this chiefly for the reason that if cut earlier, the roots are weakened and the meadows gradually destroyed. Still, as a general rule, the prevalent method of cutting grass " when in the milk," is the right one.

When hay is to be cut with seythes, the work should begin early in the day : the morning dew is a great help to the mower. There should be a liberal resting time at midday, and then the work resumed and carried on briskly until evening. A lunch of plain food, moisten ed with cold coffee or home-brewed beer, may be brought into the meadow in the middle of each forenoon and aftornoon, if the hands will be discontented without it, but it is a poor policy too keep the hands and the stomach both at work all the time, and three good meals are best for any man, however hard his work. There is enough heat in having time without the addition " fire-water." As to the expediency of using mowing-machine, we declare decidedly in their favor, especially on farms of considerable extent. They save time labor, a great deal of anxiety, and in the lorg run, money. When the mowing-machine is used, do not cut a rod before the dew is entirely off, for when the hay is cut by the machine, unless very heavy, it will need no stirring

" Make hay while the sun shines," is a good rule, but it may be carried too far in haying

CULTIVATION OF THE WRITE BEAN .- The great need of American agriculture is a good fallow crop"-some plant that will stand our hot dry summers, enrich the soil, and allow the horse-hoe to clean the land during its growth. A plant, in short, that shall occupy the same place in our rotation as the turnip does in English agriculture.

The white bean comes nearer to this than any other plant yet introduced. If the beans are consumed on the farm,-as the turnips always are in England-their cultivation would add materially to its fertility. There can be no doubt on this point. All the legaminous plants-including clover, peas, vetches, beans, etc ,-contain large quantities of nitrogen, and this when consumed by animals, or plowed under, is converted into ammoniathe very thing which we most need for the growth of the cereals. Let us, then, grow beans. No crop will grow better. When prices are good, as at present, they can be sold ; and if prices fall, they can be fed out on the farm with advantage.

In regard to their cultivation, we have written so much in previous volumes of the Genessee Farmer, that little need be added at this time. They are grown on warm, light soil, but will succeed on almost any soil if properly cultivated. For this, as for all other crops, the land should be well under drained, either naturally or artificially. The land may be plowed in the Fall and again in the Spring, and made clean and mellow before planting ; or a clover sod may be turned over and the beans planted at once. The common "white medium" is generally considered the most productive variety, but the White Mountain or Marrow yields nearly or quite as well, and brings a better price. It is a little larger, rounder, plumper, and handsomer, and is gaining in popular esteem.

They may be planted in hills two and a half feet apart and fifteen to eighteen inches apart in the rows, dropping five or six beans in each hill ; or they may be drilled in with a machine, in rows two and a half feet apart. and a single bean two inches apart in the
