An angel neared the strand one day And paused to gaze upon the child, And thought he was too bright for earth, With heart so pure and undefiled. He gently called the little one,

And told him of the brighter land ; With wond'ring eyes the child looked up, Then took the angel by the hand.

And in a little time, his feet Were treading on the shining shore,

One hillock more was made on Earth,

In Heaven was crowned one angel more, LONG—In Burlington borough, Feb. 16th, Harry Elmor, son of Mason and Martha Long, aged three years and eight months. The disease which suddenly snatched from the embrace of fond pa-rents their dear and promising boy, was diptheria that fell destroyer.
