

LOCAL AND GENERAL.

The DEATH—Dr. Johns publishes in the Columbia Republican a detailed account of the endeavors of the Committees from this Congressional District to procure from the War an adjustment of the quota for the District.

Failing to accomplish what was desired, the Committee proceeded (through Senator BUCKWOLD) the following section to be added to the Military bill:

"That when any revised enrollment in any Congressional or Draft District has been obtained or made prior to any actual drawing of names from the enrollment lists, the names of such district may be adjusted and proportioned to such revised enrollment instead of being applied to or based upon the enrollment as it may have stood before the revision."

This amendment, which passed, ought to relieve this District from the overwhelming burden placed upon it, in the way of an excessive quota.

We learn from Troy that an order has been received at the Provost Marshal's office, which credits to each district upon the present draft the term of service of volunteers. This arrangement will change the quotas in the sub-districts very materially. Towanda borough, for instance, which has had an impending quota of nearly 50, is out of the draft, and has several to spare, on account of the number of three years' men, who have been credited to the borough.

It also learns that in consequence of the representations of the Committee, a government agent was sent to Troy, examining the revised enrollment, and that he finds the late enrollments entirely proper and satisfactory. We have no doubt that such being the fact, the quota will be reduced in accordance with the number enrolled.

The ice passed out of the pool of the dam, on Friday evening, very quietly, without doing any damage.

COMPLEMENTARY SUPPER TO JUDGE MERRICK.—The Members of the Bar of this County, in order to express their affection for Judge MERRICK, on his retiring from the bench, gave him a supper at the Ward House, on Saturday evening last. The had state of the roads prevented some of the members from attending, but the affair passed off very pleasantly. Remarks were made by J. C. ADAMS, Esq., Gen. Wm. PATTON, the president of the evening; Judge WILSON, S. RICHARD PAINE, Esq., F. D. MORROW, Esq., JAMES WOOD, Esq., and Judge MERRICK. Toasts were offered by Gen. PATTON and JAMES MACFARLANE, Esq. The supper, collected and served upon the proprietors of the Ward House, and was highly appreciated by all who partook of it. The party dispersed at an early hour, highly pleased with the whole affair.

A young man is wanted at Wood's Daguerrean Gallery to learn the Photographing business.

RAGS! RAGS! RAGS!—If you would like the highest price in cash for your Rags, take them to CURTIS & CO., at the News Room.

UNITED STATES SANITARY COMMISSION. WOMEN'S BRANCH, 1307 CHESTNUT ST., PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 25th, 1865.

We wish to make an urgent appeal to you for aid in a work which we are sure will enlist all the sympathy of your hearts, and the earnest labor of your hands.

By a recent arrangement of the work of the various branches of the Sanitary Commission, it has been made the duty of the Pennsylvania branch to collect and forward all the supplies needed for our returned prisoners, who are now constantly arriving at Annapolis. They are coming to us from those terrible southern prisons, starved and almost naked—many of them suffering from neglected wounds received on the day of their capture.

Of our noble soldiers, they deserve every word of sympathy and aid. To the Pennsylvania Department has been given the honor of supplying the Sanitary Stores for the relief of these poor victims of the Rebellion.

Everything is needed. Clothing of all kinds, hospital supplies, towels, handkerchiefs, bandages, old linen and muslin quantities, for dressing their wounds and sores; delicacies of every description, pickles, dried fruit, domestic wines, apple butter, &c. To each one of our faithful allies in this blessed work we would say—'Will you send what you husband, your son, your brother would require were he one of those living skeletons who are appealing to us for help? We do not doubt your answer.'

MARCA C. GRIFER, Chairman Executive Committee.

FIRE IN HERRICK.—The Dwelling House of Mrs. ANNA CHAMBERS, in Herrick, was consumed by fire on Saturday night, Feb. 25, with all its contents. Mrs. CHAMBERS was absent at the time so she is a widow.

It is not known how the fire originated. Mrs. CHAMBERS is a hard working woman, supporting herself and three small children with her own hands. She lost everything except what she had on her back. She had one hundred and seventy-two dollars in greenbacks in her drawers, besides a good supply of clothing, also her provisions for the year, all swept from her in one night. She returned on Sunday to find her home a heap of ashes.

Two valuable Farms for sale near Towanda borough. Terms made easy. Enquire of J. J. GUFFEY, at the News Room.

STAMP DUTIES.—All business men should have an official schedule of stamp duties; but for the benefit of farmers and others who have little occasion to use stamps, we append a list of those most commonly used:

Agreements or Appraisements, five cents, each sheet of paper to be stamped.

Leases, five cents, for all rents not over three hundred dollars.

Notes, five cents, if not over one hundred dollars, and five cents for each additional one hundred dollars or any fraction thereof.

Orders, for the payment of money, two cents, if the sum be over ten dollars.

Receipts, for money received, if over twenty dollars, or for delivery of any property, two cents. Deed, or other conveyance, whereby lands are sold, the actual value of which does not exceed $500, 50 cents; for every additional $500 or fractional part thereof 50 cents.

A judgment note, of $100 or over, requires a 50 cent stamp, which may be put on at any time before entering the note.

The Presbytery of Susquehanna passed the following resolutions at their meeting at Monroeton, Feb. 1st, 1865.

Whereas our meeting at this time is rendered peculiarly solemn by the recent death of our brother Rev. J. J. FOSTER, for twenty-seven years a member of this Presbytery and Pastor of the church at Towanda, therefore,

Resolved, That while we as a Presbytery acknowledge with devout submission the bearing hand of God in this providence, we can not but feel a single our submission with a grateful acknowledgment to the grace of God in fitting him so eminently to be an able minister; in sparing him so long to the church, and enabling him by his life and conversation to illustrate the gospel which he preached, and by his labors to maintain and extend the Kingdom of Christ on earth.

Resolved, That we regard the duty devolving on us to improve the lessons of this providence by increasing diligence in the great interests to which the life and labors of our departed brother were devoted, and to cherish his memory as that of a faithful and successful minister, unwearied and untiring in the discharge of Presbyterial duty; ever ready to watch for the best interests of the churches and of his people.

Resolved. That we hereby express our sympathy with the church of Towanda, and with the family of our deceased brother, in this our common sorrow and bereavement.

Resolved, That the stated clerk be ordered to present a copy of these resolutions to the widow and family of the deceased. Attest, C. C. COSS, Stated Clerk.

JAMES M. WARD, Esq., has been appointed General Superintendent of the Barclay Coal Company, in the room of JAMES MACFARLANE, Esq., who resigned on the 15th inst. to become the General Manager of the Towanda Coal Company.

The Seven-Third Loan is now the only one being offered by the Government and in all respects, a first class investment. It pays annual interest of Seven and Three-Tenths per cent payable semi-annually; it is due in two years and a half, is exempt from taxation, and at that time if the holder wishes, it may be exchanged for the popular 5-20 six per cent gold interest bonds.

We have already disposed of a large amount of this Loan and now special agent for Jay Cook shall continue to keep the notes on hand for immediate delivery to purchasers. Five per cent. legal tender notes taken in payment and bank interest allowed.

N. N. BETTS, Jr., Cashier, First National Bank, Towanda, Government Agency for U. S. Loans.

Considerable damage was done in Sheshequin by the ice and water, backing up from the head of Smith's island, and flooding the lower part of the valley. The water, as far up as the Valley House was several feet deep in the main road. Dwellings and barns were surrounded by water, and some stock lost. The most serious loss in stock was sustained by VALENTINE SMITH, (who is in the army.) His cattle &c., were driven into the barn for security, and one horse, two cows and about thirty sheep drowned. The fruit trees in many of the orchards girdled by ice, and fences are gone, and the land badly cut up.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the rod of iron, and as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert, or as the malarial of the prairie, it is a scourge of the desert.

On Friday evening of last week, by appointment, General PATTON of Towanda, delivered a temperance lecture in Wysox. It was a brilliant address and well appreciated by those who listened: The General speaks with so much warmth and feeling, his remarks cannot fail to do good, and this appears to be his sole object. After the lecture the pledge was circulated and thirty-three names obtained. Our people become considerably interested and I hope it will do us good, for indeed there is nothing that can diffuse more wide spread and dreadful evils than intemperance, and when vice once gets the ascendancy it reigns like a despot. Then it becomes us as a people to do what we can to put down the terrible demon of intemperance, before it ascends too far to rook, remembering its touch is as deadly as the