MEXICAN EMIGRATION.

Offices have been opened in Washington and New York, where persons desirous of emigration to Mexico can be enrolled. It is said that these places of enrollment are crowded from morning till night, and that those who offer themselves at such places are veteran soldiers, and men recently dis charged from the Army and Navy.

What is unusual in this emigration scheme is, that each "emigrant" is to have a thousand dollars in money and a large tract of land in the new country to which they go.

These are what we would call surface indications of a very general movement, looking to the rescue of Mexico from the French and Austrian usurper, Maximilian. There are thousands of brave and restless men who will be soon discharged from the Union army, of martial instincts and who joy in war, and to whom these "piping times of peace" are irksome and unpleasant Some of them will go to Mexico to honestly help their Republican neighbors, others for the love of adventure, and many for promotion, reward and plunder. ever may be the motive, they will be very troublesome to the Mexican usurpers, and would be very glad to give the French regiments there a taste of the style and pluck of the Union soldier's fighting qual-

Owing to a strong wind, the flames spread very rapidly, and notwithstanding the fire departments of Jersey City and Hoboken were early at the scene, the buildings were entirely destroyed, involving a loss of about $150,000. The manufactory comprised three wooden buildings, one a car shop 450 feet long and 80 feet wide, where the wood-work of the cars was finished; another 350 feet long 75 feet wide, known as the machine-shop, in which the running-gear of the cars was manufactured, and the third building of smaller dimensions, used as a blacksmith-shop. The fire was discovered by an engineer of an incoming train on the Erie road, who at once gave the alarm, but before assistance could arrive the buildings were enveloped in flames. The loss of the company will probably amount to $120,000, in addition to which the workmen-some 200 in alllost their tools. The loss of the company is covered by covered by insurance by a general floating policy. The origin of the ire is not known. A man named Garreston, who was in the employ of the company, left his home when the alarm was given and repaired to the fire. Nothing further of his movements are known, but subsequently his charred body was extricated from one of the burning buildings, where it supposed he went to recover a portion of tools and was suffocated.
