The Genesee Farmer for June argues that worthy of cultivation than a fondness for the use of this important implement: oil, and that it is vain to hope to destroy them. Last spring when, as the phrase is, I commenced to "make my garden," Dutch eral years, asked me:

"Do you expect to raise anything here?" "Certainly," I said, "why not?"

"Why, because the weeds will smother everything. We've tried it."

But I will kill them.' 'You can't do it. We've tried."

weeds cannot be kept down." He laughed outright. Till then he dently thought that I intended to kill them in some new way, and he was much amused at my verdancy in thinking that they could be killed with the hoe. You can't do it," he said, "we've tried.

The more you hoe the more they grow."

Well, I confess, that I had a tough job. The weeds came up by the million, but I set hoeing as long as the weeds showed themselves. The dry weather was favorable, and every hoeing told immensely. By fall not a sign of a weed was to be seen. I then plowed it, and this spring it was as mellow and clean as could be desired. True there are some weeds this spring, but all who saw the land last spring, admit that the hoe has triumphed gloriously. On the other side of the house there was a piece of land which I offered my foreman for a garden. It was beautifully located, and nice warm soil, but he refused to take it, because it was so full of weed seeds that nothing could grow! I planted it to beans and hoed them thoroughly. Had a good crop, and this spring the land is as clean as any I am acquainted with. Were I a poet I would sing the praises of the hoe. I like to have it as sharp as a razor. I file mine every time it becomes a little dull. It is astonishing how much easier it cuts off the for hoeing, and killing weeds. It will do the cheese perfectly smooth. handle be made smooth with sand-paper, and then oil it. Linseed oil is the best, but
