All the great epidemics that have afflicted the human race originated among the dense, low-fed, and filthy populations of the East, and have extended westward until checked by climate influences. The course of cholera, which excites scarce ly so much alarm, or rather preparation, as it should, illustrates this law. It originated among the half-starved workmen on the Suez Canal, who were huddled together in thousands under circumstances that would

In view of these facts and the strong probability, amounting almost to a certainty, that the disease will be carried from Turkey to Western Europe, the remissness of our people is somewhat surprising. They have been warned frequently by the Wash ington authorities to adopt sanitary precautions in the principal towns and cities but, so far as New York is concerned, nothing has yet been done. The city was nev-er in a more filthy condition at this season of the year. All the conditions are favorable for the reception and extension of the disease when it is carried here in the emigrant ships .- New York Commercial.

MOVEMENTS OF TROOPS .- The troops of the Fourth Corps pass up to the interior with headquarters at San Antonia de Bexar, and will perhaps occupy all that part of Texas north and east of that point, and stretching westward until they connect with those of the Thirteenth Army Corps, lying on or near the Upper Rio Grande. It is the heart of Texas and the natural garden of the South. The only Pennsylvania regiment connected with these troops, is the Seventy-seventh, in which there are a large num ber of Harrisburgers-one or two of the companies having been almost entirely recruted in this city.
