Hints about Work.

The Stock.—"Between hay and grass" is a proverbially hard time for cattle and stock of all kinds. One's calculations are so apt to come out a little short in regard to how much it will take to carry the stock well through the minter that it is the average of the peak weevil. well through the winter, that it is the ex-ception rather than the rule that farmers horse-rake, and horse-fork immediately. can feed hay, grain and roots as liberally is very difficult to choose between the in the spring months as the needs of their animals demand. Milch cows that have just come in, or that drop their calves du-horse rakes do the best work, and pick ring this month, before they can be turned least dirt, moss and grit. Horse forks ring this month, before they can be turned to pasture, need first-rate care and feeding or the flow of milk for the whole season may be essentially diminished. Young cows especially should be fed in a way to develope as much as possible every milk-producing quality, for this will influence their value throughout their lives. The re-mewal of their coats is a great tay mon the newal of their coats is a great tax upon the vital force of neat cattle and horses, and at this season they are more benefitted by reg-

When cows are first turned to pasture, give them ted in regard to manure saving and making a little less than their usual feed morning and evening, putting them in the pasture a few hours only in the middle of the day. They will do much better for it. The angle of the subject is our excu They will do much better for it. The same cut them up on a load of muck, coveri is true of beeves, which will fatten rapidly them well with the same material, or w as warm weather comes on, if gradually good soil. Otherwise they are apt to scour and fall off consider-Collect bones, paying children 15 to 25 c ably. and clean quarters and fed regularly, will vault so as to save every thing, mixing increase in weight very fast. All their food with muck or dry soil, getting it out should be cooked, even the hay; at least all the meal shorts or bran which is min-gled with the skimmed milk, should be thor oughly cooked. When calves are fattened when the surface is dry, but before upon the cow, it is a fact worth remember-ing that it is not the cows which give the richest milk, that will bring up the most calves or fatten them the most rapidly.— When milk cannot be sold, it is often very Level the sills of out-buildings, if thrown economically disposed of by putting two calves to a good cow, and "messing" them twice a day besides. Calves will seldom the dry season. quarrel, so it is best to allow a week or fortnights difference in their ages.

Sheep.—We are strong advocates for shearing sheep unwashed. They may thus be sheared much earlier; there is little danger of their taking cold ; the coolness of the weather is supposed to influence a more rapid renewing of their covering, and by the time the summer's sun beats down hot and scorching upon their backs, they are sufficiently protected not to be blistered, as sometimes happens in late shorn flocks. All flocks ought to be dipped after shearing. Unless the ticks of lice are very thick, the dipping should be postponed till warmer weather than we usually have in May. The gradual accustoming of sheep to grass is quite as important as the same treatment for neat cattle. Do not withhold the grain, but keep it up until after the flock is well established upon grass. They should also be turned to grass gradually, two or three hours a day, in addition to their full regu-lar feeding of hay, etc. No one should overlook the great value of his stock as ma-nure makers. This will in more than the stock as manure makers. This will in many parts of the country make it very remunerative to have the cows all yarded or stabled at night, efits of and the sheep folded. The farmer rarely classifies his'

Swine as Beasts of Labor ; yet when the best use is made of them, they do an im-mense amount of hard work in the course of the summer in rooting over and mixing time comes will save the necessity of w the manure and compost heaps, converting weeds, etc., into manure. Corn scattered over the heap now and then will encourage diligence, and a few handfulls dropped here into the 20 inches doep and there into holes 20 to 30 inches deep, and pad the ends.
