Resources of Farm Manure.

This subject is always in order among farmers whose soil has been long under hausted. Western farmers occupy a virgin soil, who a few years since thought there was no use for it, and moved their barns to get out of the way of its accumulation, begin to see the utility of saving and applying it; they find that better crops are raised with it. I shall not attempt to suggest anything new, for it would seem impossible after all that has been said and written on the subject; but a frequent reiteration of similar precepts may induce some one to adopt a better system of saving and applying his manure. Does the reader make the most of his resources? Is there nothing left that can be converted into fertilizing material? When every reto correct it. source is exhausted, then it is time to resort to commercial fertilizers. How is it with good material to absorb the liquid as well as ammonia? In my own experience--not a short one -I have found a great majority of the faults or vices of cows to arise from the worse faults or vices of those who rear and and when kindness and good management fail to make the cow, indisposition, be what she ought, her case may as well be given up, and herself consigned to the shambles. I have reared a great many heifers into milking cows-hundreds of them-and seldom had a failure, not only in a good milker, but in a kind-tempered, orderly animal. ing in" than at any other age. The difference between quackery and regular treatment is, the former applies remedies indiscriminately, while the latter administers according to certain and specific wants, When the farmer breaks his wagon the quick would proceed by driving nails here and there all over it, hoping accidentally somewhere to reach the fracture. TWENTY-FIVE YEARS EXPERIENCE TWENTY-FIVE YEARS EXPERIENCE
IN DENTISTRY.—J. S. SMITH, M. D., would respectfully inform the inhabitants of Bradford Connty that he is permanantly located in Waverly, NY., where he has been in the practice of his profession for the past four years. He would say that from his long and successful practice of 25 years duration, he is familiar with all the different styles of work done in any and all Dental establishments in city or country, and is better prepared than any other Dental operator in the vicinity to do work the best adapted to the many and different cases that present themselves oftentimes to the Dentist, as he understands the art of making his own artificial teeth, and has facilities for doing the same. To those requiring under sets of teeth he would call attention to his new kind of work which consists of porcelain for both plate and teeth, and forming a continuous gum. It is more durable, more natural in appearance, and much better adapted to the gum than any other kind of work. Those in need of the same are invited to call and examine specimens. Teeth filled to last for years and often t mes for life. Chloroform, ether, and "Nitrous oxide" administered with perfect safety, as over four hundred patients within the last four years can testify.
