I knew Mr. Adams well by reputation. My personal acquaintance with him was slight. For many years past I have known him as a member of the Bradford Bar, of high standing. He had the reputation of being a man of integrity and ability. He appeared but once in Court, since I came upon the Bench; and he was then much enfeebled by the disease which finally terminated his life, In the came here, and the last in which he participated. In his argument of law questions he was terse and forcible, and in his address to the jury, his style was rapid, and sometimes vehement, and always impressive.

From the remarks which have been made and from what I have heard of him, I think I may truly say of him, that he moved in the higher walks of the profession; and that his character as a lawyer was above reproach. He was ardent and ambitions. He was cager for distinction, and loved to triumph in his forsenic struggles, but he never "stooped to conquer." "stooped to conquer."

It gives me pleasure to be able to speak thus highly of the deceased. And I trust all the members of the Bar will agree with me in saying, that he was an intelligent lawyer, a good citizen and an apright man.
