Cheese making in England-

Mr. Williard, who was sent out to obtain information on dairying in England, by the American Dairymen's Association, writes from Gloucester as follows: On the western side of the Cotswold hills, extending to the Severn river, and fifteen or twenty miles in length, is what is called the Vale of Berkeley. It has every appear ance of having been in past time, covered with the sea. This valley is the chief dairy district of the country. The native cow is of a dark color, with a black nose and muzzle, short on the legs, is a thick set, wellbuilt animal, altogether a very useful beast, but the short-horns and Herefords are replacing her.

In the regular Gloucester dairies the cheese is made thin-eight of them only weighing one hundred and twenty pounds. They are made twice a day. They commence at seven o'clock in the morning and finish about ten to eleven o'clock. In the afternoon they commence with the evening milk about five and finish again between eight and nine o'clock. These cheeses have a name in the cheese consuming world as the famous Berkeley cheese. They are rich and sweet, if made well. The maker of these are quite as tenacious of their reputation as those who make cheese worth from ten to twenty shillings per cwt. more mon-

Gloucester, which I visited to see the operations of making "single Gloster cheese," the dairy consisted of thirty-five cows. There were short-horns, large, handsome stock, but not showing extraordinary capacity for milk. The dwelling, dairy and out-buildings were all of stone, large, commodious, and everything kept in the neatest man-

The place where the cheese was made was a spacious room, with stone floor, clean, and well ventilated, and as cool and sweet an apartment as the most fastidious cheesemaking consisted of one unpainted tub for holding the milk, leaden vats for holding the whey, a circular wire curd breaker, having an upright handle springing from the center, dippers, skimmers, &c., with two box presses for pressing cheese. The last were unlike anything I had ever seen, and consisted of large, square boxes, moving up between standards by means of pully and ropes attached to a windlass. The boxes were filled with stones, iron, &c., making a weight of several hundred pounds, and are applied directly on the cheese. These presses were very nicely made, of dark wood varnished, and evidently intended to be ornamental as well as useful. From the manner of their make, and the power to be applied in raising the weight, the services of a strong man would be required. The milk was being made up twice a day, making eleven cheeses, (of fourteen pounds each,) for every two days, the cheese being about three inches thick by fourteen to fifteen inches broad. There was no heating apparatus to the room, and none is required in the "Single Gloster" process of cheese making. As soon as properly coagulated, it is broken up with the wire breaker, by moving it up and down, which has a tendency to pulp the curd, more than to break it, as the word breaking is generally understood among our cheese makers. The mass is thus left for the curd to settle, and after it has arrived, at a proper degree of firmness to be handled the whey is dipped off down to the curd, the tub canted up to drain off what whey remains, and the curd gathered to the upper edge of the tub. The whey being removed, the curd is cut across and heaped up and pressed with the hands to expel as much of the whey as possible when it is put to press. It remains in press till morning, when it is taken out, turned, and salted on the outside. It is then returned to the press and goes through the Eetna Insurance Company, Hartford, Conn., successive days. When taken from the press it is put upon the shelf for a few days, Niagara Insurance Company, to be turned every morning, and finally goes to the cheese room, when prices suit.

A cheese dealer from Bristol, who was present with us, made a test of the cheese by walking upon them as they lay spread on the floor, which we were assured was the usual method of determining their firmness of solidity. They stood the test of his weight and boots, and were pronounced one of the best dairies in Gloucester.

The hoops in which the cheese are pres sed are turned out of a solid piece of wood, and each has a bottom, pierced with holes, similiar to the hoops used in Wiltshire: and in one of the presses I counted fifteen cheeses piled up one upon the other, all of which were being pressed together.

I think, from the above description, none of our dairymen in America will care to make "Single Gloster" cheese, and I cannot see why people here will continue to keep along in the same old rut of their forefath ers without making some effort to improve.

Grape Hints.

Grapes coming in bearing should not be permitted to perfect large crops of fruit while young. It is excusable to fruit a bunch or so on a young vine, "just to test the kind," but no more should be permitted till the vine has age and strength. Vigorous growth, and great productiveness, are the antipodes of the vegetable world. Encourage as much foliage as possible on the vines, and aim to have as strong shoots at the base as at the top of the cane; this can be done by pinching out the points of the strong shoots after they have made a growth of five or six leaves. This will make growth of five or six leaves. This will make the weak ones grow stronger. Young vines grow much faster over a twiggy branch, stuck in for support, than over a straight stuck in for support, the over a straight support, the control of the farmers of the first state of the first s grow much faster over a twiggy state, stuck in for support, than over a straight nia, to all owners of safe P. Johnson, Sec'y. stick as a trellis, and generally do better every way. Where extra fine bunches of grapes are desired, pinch back the shoot bearing it about four or five inches above the bunch. This should not be done indiscriminately with all the bunches. Too much pinching and stopping injures the produc-tion of good wood for the next season.

this case, go to the opposite side of the tree, and with a spade loosen and remove the earth from under the roots and bring back earth from under the roots, and bring back the tree in this way, pulling it over to an erect form, then pack the earth firmly about the roots, so as to hold it steadily in its the roots, so as to hold it steadily in its most improved machinery, it is now completed in order for all kinds of Flouring. interfered with, growth is but little check-ed.
