Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company.—This Company was organized in 1846 on the mutual system, with the well-known advantage of furnishing insurance at its actual cost. In the amount of its business, it is the largest life insurance company in the country, and, with the exception of one German company, the largest in the world.

* * The duty of insurance being admitted, the next thing is to find a safe and cheap company; and the Connecticut Mutual is both.—

The Connecticut Mutual Life Insu ance Company especially has been eminently suc-essful in its business, and is established and adcessful in its business, and is established and admitted as the great and leading life insurance company of the country. It has during the past year done the largest business of any life insurance company in this country and probably in the world. Its receipts have been over $4,000,000.—
Its assets are now over $10,000,000, and it declares to its policy holders this year a dividend of 60 per cent. It will have issued during this fiscal year ending January 31, 1866, over nine thousand policies—a result never before attained by any iffe insurance company in the world. This company does business entirely upon the mutual system, and every dollar of its immense funds belongs to the policy holders.—Harford Dally Courant. H. B. McKean, Agent. B. McKean, Agent.

AND DEAN'S ARITHMETICS, AND OTHERS,

Having been largely adopted in the County of Brad-ford, we invite the attention of School Boards and ed-ucators generally, to the following testimonials among many others, some of which have been received from those who have those who have not only examined the books, but tested them in the school room.

ORWELL, July 13, 1866.

I have examined Osgood's series of Readers, they are well graded, the selections are good, and I think them calculated to give satisfaction to all who may have occasion to use them.

O. J. CHUBBUCK.

Wyalusing, Sept. 1, 1866.
Mr. J. K. Fleming—I have examined with some care the copy of Public School Arithmetic you sent me. I am much pleased with it, and think such a work is needed in our Academies and Migh Schools. We can not speak too highly of the Osgood Readers. We have adopted the books in our school and the change has not with universal approbabition. Yours, truly,
W. H. BROWN, Principal of Academy.

ORWELL, Sept. 5, 1866.

Mr, J. K. Fleming—Having examined Osgodd's series of Readers, and found them admirably adapted to the wants of our schools, I take pleasure in recommending them to teachers and friends of education generally. My short acquaintance with the books has impressed me so favorably, that I am almost constrained to say with others, "They are emphatically the cheapest and best series now published.

Yours, respectfully,

Mrs. H. G. SALMON.

Mr. J. K. Fleming—Sir: I have looked over the specimen books you left with me, and am much pleased with all of them, particularly so with the series of Osgood's Readers. They are emphatically Progressive works, and moreover the steps of their progression are so carefully taken. and, so securily planted, that I cannot see how any teacher who follows the directions of the author can fail of the highest success.

The exercises in articulation at the opening of all the lessons in the Primary numbers, afford a pastime as pleasant as it is profitable to those pupils whose teachers enter upon them with a spirit and a relish, and the rules and exercises in Inflection, Emphasis, &c., in the more advanced numbers, are so definite and plain that all who attend to them c n not fail to become good critics as well as good readers.

I cannot express "briefly" my high appreciation of thsee works, and while I would by no means depreciate the Sander series fur the good they have done, I yet rejoice that so great an advance on them has been reached by the Osgood Progressive Readers.
